Checking F-16 debris

MIKE SALSBURY/The Times-News

Under the watchful eye of Tom Askew, right, of the state Division of Environmental Quality, Kevin Birkett of the Army Corps of Engineers will oversee cleanup of the debris and hazardous chemicals where a U.S. Navy F-16 jet crashed in December.

Workers prepare to clean crash site

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

BERGER – Inside the chain-link fence, the ground is littered with fragments, most smaller than a hand and not recognizable as parts of any airplane.

The U.S. Navy has removed the biggest pieces of the F-16 that crashed here last December. But hazardous materials remain inside the fence that separates the 6-acre crash site from the surrounding crested wheatgrass livestock grazing land north of Hollister.

Under the supervision of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and under the watchful eyes of state and federal officials, cleanup at the site got under way Thursday as the cleanup contractor brought in its equipment.

The blackened snow has been replaced by foot-tall grass, a few sagebrush and lots of little desert wildflowers. But the impact crater where the jet hit remains a shallow depression in bare dirt.

Some parts appear to be classified.

The Navy F-16 fighter jet from San Diego's Miramar Naval Air Station was returning home from a routine training mission when it crashed on the morning of Dec. 17, shortly after takeoff from the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional airport.

The jet crashed between Berger Butte and Mud Lake in southern Twin Falls County, killing the pilot, 39-year-old Lt. Cmdr. James E. Boyle.

Kevin Birkett, Army Corps of Engineers in will be overseeing the cleanup. The corps has hired International Technology Corp. of Ohio to do the actual work.

Workers first will comb the area and pick up debris by hand. Meanwhile someone will monitor the air for possible contaminants, Birkett said.

Then workers will sample the ground to determine the amount of contamination and whether workers will need respiratory protection. Contaminated dirt will be dug up until diggers reach soil that tests "clean."

Clinton presses passage of deficit reduction plan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, buttressed by brightly colored charts, told a news conference Thursday night the nation was finally "putting our economic house in order," and urged Congress to enact his plan to cut the deficit by $500 billion.

At a session generally shunned by the nation's commercial networks, Clinton also claimed success in the U.N. military campaign against a Somali warlord. The action "crippled the forces" of Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid and is over, said the commander-in-chief.

The president used the first prime-time news conference of his administration to pitch his five-year deficit reduction plan and put in a plug for his national health reform, still in the drafting stage.

"It's necessary. It's fair and it will work," he said of the massive deficit-cutting measure now making its way through the Senate, which includes more than $200 billion in higher taxes. He said most of the tax burden would fall on the rich and, if enacted, the package would keep interest rates down and job growth up.

"Here at home America's on the move. The last few days have been impressive," Clinton said, citing congressional movement this week on two additional initiatives: reforming political campaign funding and implementing a program of national service.

"This means we are putting our economic house in order," the president said.

"The economy is still bad for most Americans, but the trends are good," Clinton said.

Within moments after Clinton left the East Room, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole attacked his economic plan and his arithmetic. Dole said the administration's plan would fall far short of its goal of $500 billion in deficit reduction.

"I thought it was a good performance, but he didn't have his facts right," Dole said in an interview. He said Clinton's program only means more spending and higher taxes. "He's a nice person, he looks good. It's the product that ought to be traded in."

President Clinton lauds Congress during his press conference for moving ahead on three of his legislative initiatives.

In an unusual attempt to capitalize on Clinton's appearance, the White House dispatched senior aide George Stephanopoulos to CNN. "We're really disappointed" that not all networks carried the news conference, he said.

On other subjects, Clinton:

• Defended his decision to support building a space station, despite its enormous pricetag. "It is an important area of science and technology," he said.

• Said he'd like to see welfare reform enacted this year but "that will depend on how warmly embraced it is by Congress." He said his plan would limit how long people could receive welfare benefits.

Finance panel delays vote on bill to reduce deficit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democrats began pushing history's largest deficit-reduction plan through the Senate Finance Committee Thursday, and President Clinton said he will oppose any changes that would allow high-income Americans to duck their share of the burden.

"We can't simply balance the budget on the backs of the old, the sick, veterans and those who work hard but barely make ends meet," Clinton told a news conference. The unfairness of 1980s tax policies must be reversed, he added, emphasizing, "I will draw the line here."

Congressional passage of the bill will assure a continuation of recent improvements in the economy, including lower interest rates, more jobs and more housing starts, he said.

Moments before the president spoke, the Senate Finance Committee delayed until Friday a final vote on its version of its deficit-reduction plan.

The $508 billion, five-year plan follows the principles laid down by Clinton, including his insistence that most of the burden be borne by upper-income people. But it differs in several details from the proposal on which his economic program is based.

The administration expects the final compromise between House and Senate to hew more closely to Clinton's plan.

Finance Committee approval is assured because the substitute plan on which it is working was agreed to unanimously Wednesday by the panel's Democrats, who hold an 11-9 majority. A vote Friday would send the bill to the Senate for consideration next week.

The Senate plan would raise motor-fuel taxes by 4.3 cents a gallon, boost income taxes significantly on the well-to-do and require about 2 million higher-income Social Security recipients to pay more tax on their benefits.

Ninety percent of the tax increase would be paid by those with incomes over $75,000 a year. The typical family earning less than $20,000 would get a tax cut through an expanded earned-income credit.

"The vote on this package will determine ... the seriousness of the words spoken on the need for reducing the deficit," said Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine. He hailed the plan as the most serious attempt ever at cutting the deficit.

FDA says no Pepsi tampering confirmed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — No reports of tampering with Diet Pepsi-Cola cans have been confirmed, the Food and Drug Administration said Thursday, dismissing the idea of any nationwide meddling with soda cans.

"Reports of possible tampering breed additional reports," said FDA Commissioner David Kessler. "It is a vicious cycle. That is what we believe happened here."

"On the basis of the information we have so far, the notion that there has been a nationwide tampering of Diet Pepsi is unfounded," Kessler said at a news conference.

He said the conclusion was based on investigators' judgment, logic and forensic analyses.

'We will prosecute false reports of tampering.'

— David Kessler, FDA commissioner

Kessler noted that there have been several federal arrests so far of people who claimed to have found syringes, nails or other objects in Pepsi cans, and that other people who had made such claims are recanting.

"I would not be surprised if there were other additional arrests," Kessler said.

He said that in addition to an arrest earlier this week in Pennsylvania, federal authorities arrested three people Thursday in Covina, Calif., in Albion, Mich., and in Ohio.

Federal authorities later announced that two more people — a woman in Colorado, and a man in South Carolina — were charged after store security cameras captured them putting objects in Pepsi containers.

Kelly Fitzwater was arrested in Beach City, Ohio, and later was arraigned in Akron, said Jim Dahl of the FDA's office of criminal investigation. Kessler earlier said the arrest had happened in Cleveland.

Federal authorities arrested Maria Luz Martinez, 62, of Covina, Thursday , accusing her of making false and fictitious statements to the FDA, said a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office in Los Angeles.

Covina police said Ms. Martinez confessed that she had fabricated her story about finding a syringe in a Pepsi.

"Let me stress one point, and I am serious about this: We will prosecute false reports of tampering," Kessler said.

In day-and-night work since the reports of possible tampering started, "we have been unable to confirm even one case of tampering," Kessler said.

Network television news shows on Thursday aired a Pepsi-supplied surveillance videotape, shot in Aurora, Colo., purporting to show a woman putting a syringe into an open can of Diet Pepsi and later claiming the can had been tampered with.

"We are releasing it to show how easy it is to tamper with a product and how easy it is to get caught," Pepsi spokesman Andrew Giangola said.

Snow falls in Wyoming as storms stretch across midlands

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms extended from the southern Rockies across the Plains to the upper Great Lakes on Thursday, and snow fell in Wyoming.

The storms were fueled by moist, unstable air streaming northward from the Gulf of Mexico and colliding with a storm system moving slowly eastward from the Great Basin, the National Weather Service said.

Severe thunderstorm watches were posted at various times for parts of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois. Similar watches were issued for parts of New Mexico.

Heavy rain during the morning across southern Minnesota sent raw sewage into basements, flooded out residents of a mobile home park in Marshall and spread mud across highways. It was the second flood in six weeks in Marshall, where more than 6 inches of rain fell overnight.

Other overnight rainfall amounts in Minnesota included 4.5 inches at St. George, 3.5 inches at Wanamingo and Brighton, and around 3 inches at Fairibault.

In Texas, Del Rio received more than 2.5 inches of rain during the early morning and more was expected.

During the afternoon, hail the diameter of quarters fell near Goldfield, Iowa, with three-quarter-inch hail at Belmond, Iowa. Thunderstorms near Fort Atkinson, Wis., generated wind up to 54 mph.

In Wyoming, the precipitation belonged to another season. Three to 4 inches of snow was reported on grassy areas near South Pass City, with up to a foot of snow at higher elevations of the Wind River Mountains. Additional accumulation was expected above 8,000 feet.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered along the Gulf Coast, and were widely scattered through the Tennessee Valley.

Cloudy, cool weather extended across the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley, and afternoon temperatures were only in the 50s and 60s.

Temperatures approached 100 in the desert Southwest.

Thursday morning's low for the lower 48 states was 33 at Rawlins, Wyo.

Youths held in slaying of trooper

GREEN RIVER, Utah (AP) — Two teen-agers were in custody Thursday after a veteran Utah Highway Patrol trooper was shot to death pursuing a fleeing car in southeastern Utah.

Trooper Dennis L. Lund, 37, of Green River, died Wednesday night after being shot in the head as he tried to apprehend the car during a high-speed chase on Interstate 70, the patrol said.

Both youths were taken to Castleview Hospital in Price, where they were treated for minor injuries and released, said Emery County dispatch coordinator Bliss Mead.

One youth, 18, was being held in the county jail. The other, 16, has been taken to a juvenile detention center, Mead said.

Sheriff Lee Hoard of Carroll County, Ind., identified the older youth as Jason Pearson, of Delphi, Ind. He said the juvenile, whose named was not released, was from nearby Camden, Ind.

Hoard said the two allegedly had been involved in a weekend incident in Camden Park in which a handgun was fired into the air. They were supposed to turn themselves Tuesday to Carroll County authorities, but no charges had been filed.

Hoard said he assumed they were afraid of going to jail, and that's why they fled. The two headed west in a car belonging to the juvenile's family, he said.

Highway Patrol Sgt. James Matthies said the two told officers they were "heading to California to get away."

Emery County authorities was investigating, but Sheriff Lamar Guymon was at the scene and unavailable for comment Thursday afternoon.

The chase started after 8 p.m. when the youths pumped gas from a station in Thompson Springs and left without paying, Matthies said.

Grand County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Brownell spotted the vehicle westbound on Interstate 70 and gave chase. Matthies said reports that the car was stolen had not been confirmed Thursday.

Weaver trial jury deliberates 2nd day

BOISE (AP) — Jurors in the murder-conspiracy trial of white separatist Randy Weaver worked through a second day of deliberations Thursday with no indication whether they were close to deciding Weaver's fate.

The panel of seven women and five men put in about nine hours Wednesday and worked all day Thursday considering multiple charges and eight weeks of testimony about last summer's slaying of a federal marshal. The panel took a break at midday for lunch in the cafeteria in the federal building.

Defense attorney David Nevin said Kevin Harris was in good spirits when he visited him for about 10 minutes late Thursday afternoon. Gerry Spence said he also visited Randy Weaver for about 15 minutes, but would not elaborate on their conversation.

"He seems optimistic," Nevin said of Harris. "He seems to be in as good spirits as you would expect him to be."

Neither attorney would speculate on how long it would take the jury to come to a unanimous decision.

The panel was sequestered for the second night Wednesday after closing arguments wound up Tuesday afternoon. About a half-dozen supporters of the Weaver family continued to wait at the courthouse for the verdict.

Court officials said U.S. District Court Judge Edward Lodge probably would leave it up to the jury whether to continue deliberating over the weekend.

Jurors' task was complicated by often-contradictory testimony from 56 witnesses and some 60 specific jury instructions from the judge.

Weaver, 45, and Kevin Harris, 25, are charged with the murder of Deputy Marshal William Degan, Quincy, Mass., during an Aug. 21 shootout at Weaver's isolated northern Idaho cabin. Weaver's son Samuel, 14, also died in the gunfight that triggered an 11-day siege. His wife, Vicki, 42, was killed by a federal sniper on the standoff's second day.

No one was charged in the deaths of Mrs. Weaver or her son.

The prosecution claimed the Weavers were religious fanatics bent on confronting a federal government they saw as evil. But the defense maintained the government was out to get Weaver for refusing to inform on other white separatists in the Panhandle.

Cleanup

The dirt will be placed on lined pads before being hauled away for disposal.

The site will then be covered with clean topsoil and reseeded.

Officials are concerned about the 850 gallons of jet fuel spilled and about the possible existence of hydrazine – a common, high-energy rocket fuel. The jet carried seven gallons of the material.

"It's nasty," Birkett said.

It is known to cause cancer. Because it is odorless it will do its damage before it is detected, and the corps is using extra precautions, he said.

But it is unlikely that any is still be at the site. It evaporates quickly and would more likely have burned in the inferno that resulted from the crash, Birkett said.

State officials also want to study the site in more detail to find out what's there, said Tom Askew, with the state Division of Environmental Quality in Twin Falls.

In addition to the spilled jet fuel, the site may also contain unexploded charges for the cockpit canopy and ejection seat and electronic components which may contain hazardous chemicals.

The cleanup is expected to last about a week.

Clinton

ple can collect benefits.

• Expressed support for U.N.-proposed economic sanctions aimed at restoring democratic rule in Haiti but predicted "there will never be a resolution ... unless we have a multinational peace keeping force" there.

• Refused to say what he might do in retaliation for an alleged Iraqi plot to assassinate former President Bush earlier this year in Kuwait. "I have not received the final report from the FBI and until I do, I don't think I should say what I will and won't do."

• Asked about a plan by international mediators to carve up Bosnia into three ethnic zones, Clinton said: "If the parties themselves, including the Bosnian government, agree to a different solution, then the United States would have to look at it very seriously."

He said he had hoped for a different outcome that would have kept Bosnia intact. To an extent, he said, "Serbian aggression has been rewarded."

Although it was his news conference debut in prime-time, NBC and CNN carried Clinton's news conference live — and NBC pulled out after 25 minutes and before reporters ran out of questions. ABC and CBS opted for commercial programming throughout.

In was Clinton's third session with reporters since the beginning of the week, a fact cited by network officials in deciding to skip the session. It is rare, though, that the networks pass up live coverage of a prime-time presidential news conference.

Borrowing a tactic favored by Ross Perot, Clinton used two large blue charts to illustrate his arguments for Congress to pass his economic program. One bore two lines — one in red, rising upward, said to represent the deficit before Clinton; the other, a yellow line pointing south, said to be the deficit after the president's plan is implemented.

"I have tried to tell the truth to the American people and if this plan passes you will see a continuation of the last several months" in which interest rates moved lower and thousands of new jobs were created, he said.

On Somalia, Clinton said Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had "reported to me this afternoon that this operation was over and was a success."

He said the U.S.-led operation had "sought to preserve the credibility of peace keeping in Somalia and around the world."

Clinton said he remains optimistic that a health-care reform plan can pass the Congress this year, even though the unveiling of the package has been repeatedly put off while he presses for enactment of his deficit-reduction plan.

"There is a real shot we can act on it this year," Clinton said, rejecting suggestions that Congress would need more time to resolve such a thorny subject.

Clinton predicted there would be a public outcry from Americans individuals and businesses worried about their health insurance coverage and costs that will increase the pressure for passage of the plan.

"Whenever the debate begins in earnest, you will see the prospects of passage intensify, not diminish," he said.

Asked whether his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, would take charge of his effort for welfare reform when her work on health care overhaul is done, Clinton sidestepped.

Baptists condemn gay rights, abortion

HOUSTON — Southern Baptists ended their convention Thursday by passing resolutions condemning homosexuality and abortion, but harmony reigned over much of the gathering that in the past has been mired in infighting.

The more than 17,000 delegates to the Southern Baptist Convention overwhelmingly endorsed a resolution that said government should not give special legal protection to homosexuals or "impose legal sanctions against those who believe homosexual conduct to be immoral."

Insurers air concerns with first lady

WASHINGTON — An insurance agent from President Clinton's home town of Hope, Ark., and three colleagues got an audience with Hillary Rodham Clinton on Thursday to air concerns about possible White House plans for changing the way Americans buy health insurance.

The agents fear they will lose out under Clinton's expected plan to form health insurance purchasing cooperatives for small businesses and individuals.

They also are anxious about the possibility that Clinton may fold the medical aspects of workers' compensation and automobile insurance into his new national health plan.

Senate tightens campaign-finance rules

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Thursday to overhaul financing of congressional campaigns and lessen special interest influence by banning contributions from political action committees.

The 60-38 vote sent the bill to the House, where a number of the Senate provisions — including the PAC ban and limited use of public financing — ran into immediate opposition.

The Senate bill features voluntary spending limits — based on a state's voting age population — aimed at helping challengers against incumbents. And it would impose a tax on campaigns that exceed the ceilings.

Incest-survivor group hit by hard times

DENVER — Hard economic times and reluctance to assist adult victims of childhood sexual abuse have taken a toll on an incest-survivors network founded by a former Miss America.

Marilyn Van Derbur Atler, crowned Miss America in 1958, formed the Survivors United Network after revealing in May 1991 that she had been sexually assaulted by her father throughout her childhood.

Monthly contributions have dropped about one-third since 1991, said Gail Harvey, the Denver-based network's president.

Judge OK's release of plaintiff's name

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — The woman who accuses Magic Johnson of giving her the AIDS virus won't back down from her lawsuit just because a judge Thursday authorized the release of her name to the public, her spokesman said.

U.S. District Judge Richard A. Enslen in Kalamazoo retitled the lawsuit to include Waymer Moore's name. The pseudonym "Jane Doe" had been used on court documents since the $2 million lawsuit was filed in October.

Enslen initially had ordered the woman's identity be withheld to protect her 5-year-old daughter. But Enslen reversed his decision after Johnson's attorneys argued last month that keeping her name confidential was hindering their case as they tried to learn of her sexual history.

Panel: Church must form task force

NEW ORLEANS — The Roman Catholic Church should create a national task force on clergy sex abuse of children, and avoid reassigning abusive priests to ministries with minors, a church-sponsored panel said Thursday.

The group of more than 30 experts on clergy sexual abuse also urged the nation's bishops to create independent diocesan boards to oversee church handling of allegations, and to hold a national day of prayer and penance for victims.

Members of an abuse survivors group called the report a positive step, but said the church has yet to live up to previous statements of concern.

Powell against any alterations in list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff warned Thursday against altering the Defense Department's recommended list of base closings.

"If we dismember this list, I do not think there is enough time remaining for me as chairman to thoroughly assess an alternative solution ... and certify its ... acceptability to the secretary and to the president," Gen. Colin Powell told the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission.

The chairman reiterated the admonition he made to the commission in March that it accept the Pentagon list of closings and scalebacks in its entirety.

And if the United States fails to complete its third round of base closures in the past five years, it would seriously undermine the military, Powell said.

Aspin testified with the Joint Chiefs of Staff in strong support of the Pentagon's list put forth March 12 that proposes closing 31 major bases and shutting down or realigning 134 others.

In his prepared statement, Aspin adopted the same hardline position as Powell, but in his presentation, the defense secretary tempered his comments.

"I urge the commission to make the tough, yet absolutely necessary, decisions to support our military capability by closing the bases I've recommended," Aspin said in his prepared remarks.

He added that he opposes the commission significantly changing the list but accepts the reality that the independent panel will make some alterations.

"I'm not saying if you don't add a base or two around the edge, I'm not arguing that, I am arguing against a massive increase in the number of bases being closed beyond the list that we were talking about," Aspin said.

The presidentially appointed commission must decide by July 1 what bases should be closed or realigned. Their recommendations will be forwarded to President Clinton, who has until July 15 either to accept or reject them in their entirety.

If Clinton rejects the list, the panel must submit a revised list by Aug. 15 and the president must approve that proposal by Sept. 1. Powell's term as chairman ends on Sept. 30.

Two years ago, the base closing commission made few changes to former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's list, subtracting just four bases from his list.

This year's panel added 69 bases to its list of candidates, including 47 major facilities, and commission members say there will be changes.

The defense secretary contended that his list was based on a rigorous analysis, that adding bases would be premature as the military conducts a review of its forces and that targeting too many bases would overwhelm the system to assisted affected communities.

Court nominee calls on senators before hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruth Bader Ginsburg visited an ice cream social Thursday as she courted senators in her quest for confirmation to the Supreme Court.

"I wish you luck. You've got my vote," Sen. John Warner, R-Va., told the federal appellate judge during a chance encounter in a Senate office building hallway.

Other senators were not making promises in public, although Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., told reporters, "I'm strongly leaning toward voting for her."

A group of congressional interns applauded as Ginsburg entered Simon's office.

"Thank you," she told them. "That gives me strength for the rest of the day."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., introduced Ginsburg to his dog, and Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, escorted her to an ice cream social at Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole's office.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said he talked with Ginsburg about free speech and freedom of religion.

One of the revised designs for Space Station Freedom, expected to trim $8 billion from the proposed station's cost, orbits above Earth in this artist's rendition. President Clinton said Thursday he backs the 'scaled-down' version.

Some say press treatment unfair

Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than four Americans in 10 taking part in a survey say the press is being unfair to President Clinton.

Fifty-one percent of those asked said Clinton was getting fair treatment but 43 percent disagreed. The remainder did not have an opinion or refused to give one.

The poll, released Thursday by the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press, a unit of the company that publishes the Los Angeles Times, was conducted between June 11 and last Tuesday, with questions put to 1,006 adults. It has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Thirty-five percent of those surveyed said the press was too critical of the Clinton administration's policies and performance and 36 percent said it was too critical of Clinton personally.

Twenty-eight percent said Hillary Rodham Clinton was getting too much criticism in the press.

The poll came as Clinton undertook an effort to improve his image, with the hiring of David Gergan, once Ronald Reagan's adviser, to offer guidance.

Clinton, capitalizing on this week's legislative successes in the Senate and the favorable reception accorded Supreme Court nominee Ruth Bader Ginsburg, called a prime-time evening news conference Thursday, his fourth meeting with reporters this week.

In the survey, Ross Perot's press treatment was rated as too critical by 11 percent of those surveyed. Sixty-one percent said his press treatment was about right and 22 percent said the press was not critical enough. The others did not offer an answer.

Almost everyone in the poll said Clinton is less popular than he was a few months ago, and most of them blamed Clinton himself.

Forty-four percent said he was less popular because he had not done a very good job, 20 percent because of press criticism and 31 percent because Congress has not cooperated with him. The rest offered no answer.

When the question on press handling was asked during low points in the popularity of former Presidents Bush and Reagan, the public was more likely to approve their treatment by the press.

In January 1992, as Bush's approval rating was sinking in the face of a weak economy, his press treatment was judged as fair by 77 percent of the public.

Ex-HUD official pleads guilty in influence-peddling scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The highest official indicted in the HUD influence-peddling scandal pleaded guilty Thursday to reduced charges of obstructing justice and accepting a gratuity.

Thomas T. Demery — former assistant housing secretary in the Reagan administration — entered guilty pleas to the two felony counts in a brief appearance before U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

As part of the plea agreement, Demery, the third-highest ranking official at the Department of Housing and Urban Development from 1986 until 1989, agreed to cooperate with special prosecutors in their investigation.

Clinton asks for billions to fund new space station, supercollider

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton pushed the budget-conscious Congress Thursday to go forward with two of the most expensive and controversial science projects ever.

They are a space station for research in zero-gravity and a particle accelerator for fundamental knowledge about matter and energy.

For the space station, Clinton wants to spend $10.5 billion over five years, White House and other sources said. Clinton on Thursday described the space station as a "reduced cost" scaled-down version of a project that officials said could put four astronauts in orbit soon after the turn of the century.

The scaled-down plan Clinton signed off on would save $8 billion to $9 billion by the year 2000 and $18 billion over the life of the project, if approved by Congress, said the White House.

For the superconducting supercollider, being built in Texas, the costs have been estimated at $8.25 billion but are expected to rise to $10 billion.

"These are tough economic times, yet our administration supports this project as part of its broad investment package in science and technology," Clinton said of the supercollider in a letter to Congress.

"Abandoning the SSC at this point would signal that the United States is compromising its position of leadership in basic science — a position unquestioned for generations," the president wrote.

The supercollider is being built about 30 miles south of Dallas. It consists of magnets that will steer and focus beams of protons moving in opposite directions until they collide at nearly the speed of light. Two large detectors will record the collisons for analysis by physicists.

The space station project lumbered along for eight years and cost $9 billion without any flight hardware to show for it. Clinton took a personal hand in it in February when he told NASA to cut costs in half.

He asked NASA to see how much of a station $5 billion, $7 billion and $9 billion would buy. After a frenzied effort by three redesign teams, NASA said that amount would buy nothing useful. It came up with options ranging in cost from $11.9 billion to $13.3 billion.

Sources said Clinton, in a briefing Monday night, rejected to cheapest version, a station representing a giant can. He chose between two other options whose designs closely resemble the station that has been on the drawing board.

50-something people squeezed by younger, older generations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans are nearing retirement without pensions, assets or health insurance.

The early results from a study of the 50-something generation, released Thursday by the National Institute on Aging, also find many middle-age Americans sandwiched between obligations to frail parents and their own adult children, or even their grandchildren.

"The evidence clearly shows we have many more generous grandparents than greedy geezers," said Daniel Perry, executive director of the Alliance for Aging Research, at a news conference to release the study. "Child-care consumes a large amount of time for today's grandparents. At the same time, many are also helping frail parents of their own."

Conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, the study is based on interviews with 12,600 Americans age 51 to 61 or married to someone in that age range, making it one of the largest studies of how people fare as they age.

"People nearing retirement are mostly in pretty good shape physically, mentally and economically," said F. Thomas Juster, who directed the study.

"But behind the averages are large proportions of people falling into some category — ill or disabled, without pensions, insurance or assets, or lacking family support — that may rob them of a satisfying and successful retirement," said Juster, an economics professor.

The study began in 1990 and researchers plan to continue their work for the next 12 years, including interviews every two years with the 7,600 participating households.

The research is designed to provide reliable information on the labor force activity, health status and family responsibilities of Americans nearing retirement.

Among the study's findings:

• Almost half of those surveyed believe that there is some likelihood they could lose their job in the next year and that they have less than a 50-50 chance of finding a new job in a few months.

• The median income among households surveyed was about $37,500, with median assets about $80,000. About 20 percent of couples reported virtually no assets.

• One out of every seven people surveyed is not covered by any kind of health insurance. Substantially higher numbers of Black and Hispanic households don't have a health plan.

• Two in five will have no pension income other than Social Security.

• About two-thirds of the participants say they're in excellent or very good health. But 20 percent reported a health condition that limits work.

• Almost three-fourths of participants would prefer to go from a full-time job to part-time work when they retire, rather than leave the work force abruptly.

• About one in five is afraid to leave a current jobs for fear of losing pensions or health insurance benefits by switching employers.

• About 70 percent of the married couples are members of four-generation families. Forty-five percent of the married women devote 15 hours a week to caring for their grandchildren, and 42 percent of the single women provide 20 hours a week in grandchild-care.

• Two-thirds of those surveyed have living parents or parents-in-law. About one-third have older parents who need personal care or supervision.

Escaped bigamist turns himself in

Pou, 33, escaped from the March Air Force Base stockade in Riverside County on June 1, embarrassing the military because he had repeatedly warned them he could easily walk away from the jail.

He was awaiting trial on bank robbery charges and was serving an 18-month sentence for bigamy and desertion charges stemming from a 1987 disappearance.

As for his two weeks on the lam, Pou would only say, "I was kicking back in the Southern California mountains and woods. I was camping and fishing."

Tribunal wants court for abusers

VIENNA, Austria — Judges of a symbolic tribunal on women's rights called Thursday for a special U.N. investigator and an international court to prosecute abusers of women.

The recommendations were made public two days after more than 1,000 people heard women testify at a so-called Global Tribunal on Violations of Women's Human Rights, where they spoke about sexual abuse in the family and in war.

The four judges included Gertrude Mongella, the secretary-general of the United Nations World Conference on Women, which will be held in Beijing in 1995.

Mrs. Mongella rejected suggestions that China's human rights record made it an unsuitable venue for such an important U.N. conference.

Russia, Ukraine will divide fleet

MOSCOW — The presidents of Russia and Ukraine agreed Thursday to divide the former Soviet Black Sea fleet into separate navies.

Russia also promised to guarantee security for Ukraine, which demanded such a pact before giving up its nuclear arsenal.

President Boris Yeltsin and Ukraine's president, Leonid Kravchuk, also agreed to share the naval ports at Sevastopol and other harbors in Ukraine, according to Anatoly Krasikov, Yeltsin's spokesman.

Ukraine and Russia have been arguing for more than a year over the fleet, one of the most powerful in the world with about 70,000 servicemen, 350 ships, aircraft and sprawling facilities on Ukrainian territory.

John back in Israel after leaving

TEL AVIV, Israel — Elton John returned to perform in Israel on Thursday, a day after abruptly leaving the country in a huff over pushy photographers and slow-moving passport officials.

John was whisked through passport control and photographers were kept away by mounted police and barbed wire.

Sensitive to international opinion, many Israelis were angered or embarrassed by the British rocker's sudden departure Wednesday after being mobbed at the airport. The "Elton John affair" has dominated talk shows, pushing even Middle East peace talks to the sidelines.

European plane sets record for airliners

PARIS — An Airbus A-340 set the record for the longest nonstop flight by a commercial airliner Thursday, traveling from France to New Zealand in 21½ hours.

The 11,868-mile flight beat the 1989 record set by a Boeing 747, which flew 11,185 miles from London to Sydney, Australia. Boeing is Airbus' archrival in the commercial jetliner market.

Four pilots — three French and one British — flew the European aircraft at a cruising speed of 545 mph.

In another record flight, a single-engine French-built TBM-700 turboprop landed at Le Bourget on Thursday after circling the globe in just under 80 hours, cutting the previous record by nearly half.

Owen calls on Muslims to accept plan

GENEVA — In a stunning turnabout, international mediators urged Bosnia's Muslim-led government Thursday to acknowledge its underdog position and accept Serb-Croat proposals to divide Bosnia into three ethnic zones.

"There won't be a lot of honor, and there won't be anywhere near the sort of settlement that I would have liked. But I am a realist, and we have to live with what has happened on the ground," said European Community envoy Lord David Owen.

For months, Owen championed a plan he co-authored to divide Bosnia into 10 ethnic areas with a jointly administered capital. His comments Thursday suggested the plan could be abandoned because of relentless fighting among the rival factions.

Many of the ethnic borders of the so-called Vance-Owen plan no longer stand following land grabs by all sides. Muslims, however, have come under the greatest pressure.

Canadian triplets born 45 days apart

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A woman delivered the first of her triplets, a fragile 2-pound, 1-ounce boy, on April 30. His brother and sister came a remarkable 45 days later.

Dr. Keith Williams, who oversaw the two-stage delivery, called it a "medical miracle" that shows fetuses can have a higher chance of survival through delayed delivery so they have more time to develop and gain weight.

It is the second time on record that days had elapsed between triplets' births, said officials at Grace Hospital, where the babies were born. A case in Baltimore in 1991 involved an 11-day delay.

In both cases, the babies were delivered vaginally rather than by Caesarean section.

Joanne March, a 29-year-old dental hygienist from Kelowna in south-central British Columbia, was admitted to a hospital in Kelowna on March 24, about 22 weeks into her pregnancy and on the brink of delivering her triplets.

She was transferred to Grace Hospital. March was ordered to stay in bed and given drugs to prevent labor.

On April 30, Clayton was born 10 weeks early. March's labor was then stopped and the regimen of strict bed rest and medication resumed, Williams told reporters.

Doctors decided Monday to deliver the two remaining babies three weeks before full term. March delivered a boy who weighed 4 pounds, 1 ounce and a girl weighing 4 pounds, 13 ounces.

"The first six weeks were pretty tense because everybody thought for sure we'd lose them," March said. "Then there was a period you go through where they are maybe handicapped. The farther along we got the more comfortable we felt.

"And now everything's worked out well. We're very proud, proud, proud parents," she said.

"I don't know if you can ever be totally prepared," said her husband, Manley, a 30-year-old optometrist. "We've certainly tried our best and we're going to learn a little new every day."

All three babies were in a special-care nursery Thursday at the Vancouver hospital.

Clayton has lung problems related to his premature birth but weighs more than 3 pounds. The other infants were "a little bit premature but they're both fine," hospital spokesman Ted Haugen said. "They're basically in there just for a little bit of support and observation at this point."

Killer stalks homosexuals in London

LONDON (AP) — A serial killer stalking London's homosexual community has murdered five men, including an American, and news reports Thursday said he has told police he will keep on killing a victim a week.

Scotland Yard confirmed a man has telephoned them anonymously with precise information about all the murders.

The victims, aged 33 to 45, were all killed in their own homes, between March 8 and Tuesday. Police said at least four were homosexuals and three carried the AIDS virus.

In each case, the killer is believed to have struck up a casual acquaintance in a pub or club. All were killed in "intimate circumstances," said the Gay London Policing Group (GALPO), a gay men's organization.

American businessman Peter Bradley, 35, of Sulphur Springs, Texas, was the third victim found naked, bound and strangled at his apartment June 4. Police said they had no evidence he was a homosexual, but he was linked with the other victims because of the way he died.

The fifth victim, from Malta, was found Tuesday night at his south London home after the killer called police to tell them of the murder.

Police then went public to warn homosexuals of a serial killer.

'Triple dip' raises officials' ire, threatens school levy

The messy spat between local legislators and Twin Falls school officials is dismaying, because both are right.

Yes, legislators, you did appropriate a decent amount of money for Idaho schools this year – about a 6.2 percent increase.

But yes, school officials, you do make a legitimate case for needing a little boost from local property taxpayers.

This year the Legislature increased statewide school spending by a reasonably hefty $31 million. But nearly half that figure is earmarked for purposes other than balancing local districts' budgets – including about $10 million to beef up state pension benefits. (Remember that point; it's important later.)

Once the money has been wrung through budgetary calculations too complex and dull to describe here, the Twin Falls district comes up with slightly less money to pay the bills next year than it had in the just-finished school year.

So the district is asking local voters for $840,000. We'll vote Tuesday.

The special tax levy would go for two basic purposes:

• First, it would let the district maintain a variety of services that the School Board says will otherwise have to go. A few examples: crossing guards, a librarian, a custodian, some teachers and part of the coaching budget.

You and your neighbor might disagree about the importance of some items on the list. But most of us would agree that we'd rather not do without that block of services.

• Second, the special levy would give every teacher a 3 percent cost-of-living raise.

On that second point, the legislators raise a legitimate beef: All but the most experienced employees are on a step-raise schedule. That means three out of four are already slated for pay bumps this year, as compensation for experience and continuing education.

And that pension improvement we mentioned earlier is also a form of compensation enhancement. That means, as the legislators pointed out in a "Reader comment" column Thursday, that some teachers will receive three blessings in one year – a "triple dip."

Moreover, each of those compensation enhancements – the step raise, the cost-of-living bump and the pension increase – creates a long-term obligation on taxpayers, without any tangible improvement in school programs.

When the School Board proposed the tax levy last month, we immediately endorsed it as a needed supplement to the district's budget. That endorsement stands.

But with high-profile opposition from several members of the Legislature, failure at the polls next week is a real possibility. So here's a suggestion:

If voters side with the lawmakers Tuesday, the School Board could come back with a request for a slightly smaller levy: Maintain the endangered programs and services, and provide a cost-of-living raise for employees who aren't on the step scale. But eliminate the so-called "triple dip" for some employees.

That small change – and mending some fences with local lawmakers – might put an end to the controversy.

Ex-nominee says Ginsburg 'about as good as we'll get' from White House

Cal Thomas

"She is about as good as we'll get out of the Clinton administration," Judge Robert Bork said to me about Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg's nomination to the Supreme Court.

"She'll be liberal on social issues, such as abortion and probably homosexuality, but away from these, she will not be as far out as Justices William O. Douglas and William Brennan were."

Bork described Ginsburg's view that the Constitution changes with the times as "nutty," but other than that he thinks she is a good judge who will be confirmed.

She has been billed as a "conciliator" and "coalition builder" but does not seem to fall into that liberal wing of legal interpretation that advocates an activist judiciary. In a Harvard Law Review article, "The Intercircuit Committee," Judge Ginsburg rejected a proposal to consolidate more authority in federal courts as "carry(ing) the 'imperial' judiciary to its logical limits. A better solution is to improve lawmaking function within the legislature."

Repeatedly, Judge Ginsburg's writings indicate a woman who believes courts should go slow and not get too far ahead of the people when they are influencing social change. But her strategy has less to do with principle on some issues, such as abortion, than it does with technique.

In Roe vs. Wade, she finds fault only in the fact that the Supreme Court moved too swiftly, empowering a pro-life movement and opposition to federal funding, which she supports. This is the frog-in-the-kettle analogy that seeks to turn up the heat slowly on social change rather than drop the public into a boiling caldron.

In an article for Texas Lawyer on May 10, 1993, she wrote, "Without taking giant strides and thereby risking a backlash too forceful to contain, the court, through constitutional adjudication, can reinforce or signal a green light for social change."

What gives some pro-choice groups pause is Judge Ginsburg's approval of Planned Parenthood vs. Casey, in which the court upheld Pennsylvania's restrictions on abortion. She said the decision has promoted a "renewed dialogue" about abortion.

Judge Ginsburg argued in an April 6, 1984, speech at the University of North Carolina and again on March 9 of this year at New York University that the court ought to have followed the same path it did in women's rights cases: providing narrowly drawn benefits but encouraging the Congress and legislatures to "rethink ancient positions on these questions" while opening a "dialogue with the political branches of government."

She contends that Roe "invited no dialogue with legislators" and criticized the court for fashioning "a regime blanketing the subject, a set of rules that displaced virtually every state law then in force." While this may sound encouraging to pro-lifers, it is clear from her writings and speeches that this criticism is based largely on the controversy that grew out of the decision, not on the obligation of the state to protect the right to life of the unborn.

Judge Ginsburg also has said that Roe undermined the court's prestige: "Its precarious position as final arbiter of constitutional questions was exposed."

Few issues in history lend themselves less to splitting the difference than abortion. Yet, Judge Ginsburg attempted to do that in her University of North Carolina speech:

"I appreciate the intense divisions of opinion on the moral question and recognize that abortion today cannot fairly be described as nothing more than birth control delayed. The conflict, however, is not simply one between a fetus' interest and a woman's interests, narrowly conceived, nor is the overriding issue state versus private control of a woman's body for a span of nine months. Also in the balance is a woman's autonomous charge of her full life's course."

No one is in autonomous charge of his or her life. Otherwise there would be no laws restricting behavior in areas involving drugs, prostitution, speed limits, even suicide.

Judge Ginsburg is good on the "marriage penalty." She doesn't think two-income couples should be taxed at rates higher than a two-person household in which only one works. Conservatives have been trying for years to get Congress to provide that kind of tax relief without success.

Judge Ginsburg favors the dormant Equal Rights Amendment and looks favorably upon "goals and timetables" (a euphemism for affirmative action or quotas) for placing minorities and women in management jobs.

Given President and Hillary Clinton's ultra-liberal leanings, the choice could have been a lot worse. As Judge Bork says, Judge Ginsburg is as good as we'll get out of this administration.

Levy needs support June 22

Thank you for the favorable editorial toward the June 22 override levy.

At the bargaining table, we have been sympathetic with the district's insufficient legislative funding and agreed to little or no salary increase the past two years in order to avoid asking for an override. We have watched the district's carry over dwindle and agree that it can go no lower. We have been disheartened as positions, programs, supplies and textbooks have been threatened and then cut because there is no money to support these items.

Enrollment continues to increase, bringing class size to alarming levels, but there are no funds to hire additional positions to address this concern. Teachers are finding other means of employment or other districts in which to teach because families cannot survive on teachers' salaries in Twin Falls. Insurance increases have eaten up any hope of salary improvement; teachers will take home less money next year than two years ago.

We have examined the district's budget for "fat to trim," but the district has been frugal with its money. Twin Falls ranks 105th of 113 districts in per-pupil expenditures. Only eight districts in the state spend less per student than we do.

The joint decision by the board and the teachers' association is that we have no other option but to ask for an override levy. The tax increase is minimal, but the benefits are great.

Please join us in supporting the levy on June 22. The district cannot continue to produce the same product with less money. Without this levy, the quality of education in Twin Falls will diminish.

Proposed levy unnecessary

Say "no" to triple dipping (enhanced retirement benefits, salary schedule increases and a raise in addition) by voting "no" on the June 22 school board levy.

The Legislature did increase funding to public schools this year up to 6.24 percent – an additional $31 million increase! In addition, it will receive up to $5 million in one-time money from the 1993 general account surplus. According to Maxine Bell, a member of the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, District 411 will receive $149,095 from that surplus.

Forty percent of the $840,000 levy will be used for a cost-of-living raise. With $336,000 being used for a pay raise and $149,095 coming from surplus, how can the district justify an $840,000 levy?

Education groups lobbied heavily for the retirement benefit package and received what they asked for. Now they want the taxpayer to fund additional increases for their pay raise when they already have a salary schedule with automatic raises built in depending on the length of service and continuing education.

Voting "no" does not mean that we do not want excellence in education or textbooks and crossing guards for our children. It means that we want our school administration to be accountable to the patrons of this district.

Our district has been in the process of educational reform with Outcomes Driven Developmental Model for the past two years. ODDM was put into effect without parents being included in the decision-making process. According to the Twin Falls Education Association, the district has spent $170,795.24 on ODDM for the past two years. Additional money will be needed to continually fund this process for continued teacher training and the new assessments that will measure the subjective rather than the objective.

With $170,795.24 already having been spent on ODDM, I wonder how many textbooks this could have purchased. It could have been used in the area of crossing guards, teacher aides or for new teachers to alleviate overcrowding, yet our district would rather spend the money on a highly controversial program that has been unsuccessful in many areas.

An article put out by the Education Commission of the States in 1993 states, "Statistical proof that the outcomes-based education works may not be available for a number of years." Since there isn't any statistical "proof" that OBE works, our children will be the guinea pigs and another generation will be lost that cannot perform the 3 R's.

Don't let your tax money support a program that will further deteriorate our schools. Remember, it has been stated that once this levy passes, it will be an annual event. Can we really afford to support an educational system that does not want to be accountable to the taxpayer?

Governor sends wrong message

I am writing about the picture in Tuesday's newspaper that shows Gov. Andrus drinking beer.

I just finished fifth grade, but when I was in the fourth grade, Gov. Andrus came to my class and said, "Don't use beer, cigarettes, cocaine or any other kinds of drugs."

I also wrote a letter to Gov. Andrus saying I don't think he set a very good example when he does things he tells children not to do.

What has happened to the scruples of our state leaders?

As our governor has traveled throughout the state talking to our children, you would think he had their interest at hand. Wrong. As I picked up The Times-News Tuesday morning, I was shocked to see a picture of our illustrious governor guzzling a can of beer.

What the leaders drink doesn't matter to most of us, but when it is flaunted on the front page of the local paper, how can you teach our children that alcohol is one of our worst social problems.

Oh the front page of the second section, Magic Valley, one of the captions read, "1-day symposium to address alcohol abuse, court system." Who is leading who? Not our governor. Take a good look at this picture, governor. Are you proud of it?

Court to hear bid to halt law

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court will listen to verbal arguments next Friday on a bid by state schools chief Jerry Evans to block a new law creating a divided state Board of Education.

The law, which was House Bill 345 in the last legislative session, is scheduled to go into effect July 1. It directs the creation of separate four-person councils to administer public schools and the higher education system.

The Board of Education now supervises the entire educational system. The higher education council also is to serve as the Board of Regents for the University of Idaho.

In a motion filed with the Supreme Court this week, Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, argued that the law is unconstitutional, and if it goes into effect, any decisions by the new councils could be challenged.

Since the board administers about 75 percent of the state's general budget, until the constitutional challenge is resolved, any spending by the new councils "will be suspect and result in legal challenges," Evans' brief claimed.

In an order signed by Chief Justice Charles McDevitt, the court ordered the state to file an answer to the Evans petition by Friday. Verbal arguments in the case were set for 4:10 p.m. June 25 with indications that the court will try for a decision before the new law is scheduled to go into effect six days later.

It promises to be a busy day for the court. An hour earlier, it's scheduled to hear oral arguments in two lawsuits challenging the ballot title given to the anti-gay initiative.

The initiative seeks to bar any special rights for homosexuals and the teaching of homosexuality as an alternative lifestyle in the schools.

Meanwhile, Gov. Cecil Andrus is waiting to see what the courts do in the split board case.

"He will defer to the court and he will follow the law," said Press Secretary Scott Peyron. "He's watching the calendar and he will do what he has to do when the law comes into effect."

The present Board of Education has seven members plus Evans. The governor would be required to appoint one new board member so there will be two councils of four members each, with membership on each determined by the governor. The new law also calls for Evans to serve on both councils as a voting member.

Andrus wants hydro project held to account

BOISE (AP) — The state will seek full mitigation for the environmental damage when an eastern Idaho hydroelectric project blew out, spewing sediment into the Fall River.

Gov. Cecil Andrus urged the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to include the cost of environmental restoration in penalties levied against the developer, Marysville Hydro Partners.

FERC denied Wednesday an Idaho appeal aimed at halting construction of the incomplete project, but proposed a fine of $500,000 against Marysville Hydro. It is the highest fine ever levied by FERC, which illustrates the developers' negligence and the major damage to a quality trout stream, the governor said.

Andrus said FERC officials disclosed the fine will be placed into the federal treasury and will not be used to repair a river ecosystem spoiled by tons of sediment.

"Money from penalties must go into repair of a once remarkable fishery," Andrus said. "Idaho will see to it that a flawed design and poor management of the project isn't allowed to permanently spoil this extraordinary stretch of river."

The actual fine to be paid will be negotiated between FERC and the developer. Andrus said FERC should ensure the penalties fit the severity of the damage.

3 cleared of charges

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Three Idaho men have been acquitted on charges they operated snowmobiles inside the Jedediah Smith Wilderness on the Targhee National Forest in western Wyoming.

Gordon Harker, of Rigby, and Gary Robson and Bud Bailey, both of Felt, were found innocent Tuesday in a trial before U.S. District Judge Alan Johnson.

Johnson ruled the Forest Service did not properly define or post the wilderness boundary with signs in the area where the snowmobilers were cited.

Critics say swap is unfair

McCALL (AP) — A proposed land swap between industrialist J.R. Simplot and the state means a loss for all Idahoans, its critics say.

The exchange would involve several thousand acres of logged-over Simplot timber lands in High Valley for 200 acres of state-owned property along the North Fork of the Payette River four miles south of McCall.

Simplot

It already has the initial approval of the state Land Board, said Bill Petzak, local coordinator for the Idaho Department of Lands. The swap is yet to be finalized and Simplot is bringing in more land for consideration, Petzak said.

"We have a great number of people who want to see that river property preserved for public access," he added.

Simplot is also interested in bringing into the deal two Payette Lake cabin sites owned by the state but leased to Simplot. A 20-acre spot owned by Simplot and an 80-acre parcel at Paddy Flat could also be included.

McCall resident Dave Herold said the timber ground is not a fair trade for the river frontage, which is rich in wildlife. It provides some of the last public access to the river between McCall and Cascade Reservoir, he said.

"From what I see, the whole deal stinks."

Petzak, however, said the Department of Lands is not in the business of making bad trades. The time to buy timber land is after it has been logged over. That will make the state about $40 per acre per year.

"We do better on our timber land than anything," he said. The department is required to manage state endowment land for the best return for the schools.

Health board approves fees for emissions

BOISE (AP) — The Board of Health and Welfare has given its final approval to new regulations imposing fees on Idaho industry based on the amount of emissions and pollution from plants.

Health and Welfare workers estimated Thursday it would generate about $1.9 million per year and pay for state regulation of industrial pollution. The money will be used to hire 27 new staff.

Thursday's vote was final approval of rules adopted on an temporary basis in March. Industry organizations back the plan, in part so the state will do the regulating of air pollution sources and not the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Rick Phillips, public affairs director for the J.R. Simplot Co. plant at Pocatello, said the company estimates it will pay about $120,000 per year under the new fee system.

"We don't think it's a bad idea," he said. "The good part about it is it gives companies a solid financial incentive to reduce their emissions.

Phillips said his company would rather have the state do the regulating than EPA. "The state is very reasonable, they understand what we're about," he said.

Public hearings were held in May, and the board approved revised regulation exempting country grain elevators. The rules also exempt "confined animal feeding operations" or cattle feedlots.

Board members said they felt the federal Clean Air Act was not intended to regulate either industry.

The fee is based on a $30 per ton emission charge for large emitters of sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, volatile organic compounds, small particles and nitrogen oxides.

Mother faces trial after death of son

REXBURG (AP) — A Rexburg mother faces a Sept. 21 trial on felony charges in connection with the death of her 21-month-old son.

Gayle Stephens, 20, has pleaded innocent to knowingly placing her son, Kristopher Purcell, in danger by allowing her boyfriend, Darrin Carter, to baby-sit the boy.

According to court documents, Stephens knew Carter had a drinking problem and a violent temper. Carter, 21, has been charged with first-degree murder for allegedly causing the youngster's fatal head injuries on April 24.

Donor offers reward to solve case

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — An anonymous donor has post a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of anyone involved with the harassment of political and anti-development activist Deb Hamm.

She lived at Hayden Lake but left Idaho in February with her young son after they were run off the road numerous times, burglarized twice and threatened and harassed by telephone.

"I'm shocked and appreciative," Hamm said, after being informed of a reward offered through the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations.

Hamm was active in groups challenging new subdivisions in Kootenai County and had become a thorn in the side of some developers.

Task Force Chairman Tony Stewart, Coeur d'Alene, said finding out who's responsible is one of the goals of the reward.

Can school levy pass the test?

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The School District's proposed $840,000 override levy includes raises for district employees that would barely outpace cost-of-living increases, district officials say.

They say teachers will receive:

• Automatic pay raises of 3 percent to 8 percent that are linked to experience and education.

• Increased retirement benefits because of legislative action this spring.

• And a 3 percent pay hike if the levy passes.

"Why give them the whole store this year?" Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls said.

The district has also decided to increase the amount it pays per employee for medical and dental benefits by almost $17 a month to $150, Superintendent Terrell Donicht said.

Raises make up $370,000, or 44 percent, of the levy.

The levy would also prevent the district from having to cut $380,000 for textbooks,

Election facts

Quick facts about the Twin Falls School District's $840,000 override levy:

• Registered Twin Falls residents can vote from noon until 8 p.m. Tuesday at any of the district's six elementary schools.

• The levy requires a simple majority to pass.

• Someone with a $70,000 home and a homeowner's exemption would pay an additional $5.04 a year if the levy passes.

• Taxes on agricultural or commercial property would increase about $11.20 for every $100,000 of property.

School pay

Here are several examples of how Tuesday's supplemental levy election will affect teacher and administrative pay. Twin Falls School District teachers can receive annual pay raises until they reach their 20th year. They also can receive pay hikes for each 15 credits of additional college credits they accrue after hiring.

Here's what may be cut if proposed levy fails

TWIN FALLS – If an $840,000 supplemental levy fails at the polls Tuesday, Twin Falls School District officials plan these cuts:

Textbooks – $60,000. District would spend $175,000 instead of usual $220,000-$250,000. Affected: math workbooks for kindergarten through second grade; high school math books; vocational texts.

Crossing guards – $16,000. Eliminates all crossing guards.

Teacher aides – $26,000. Reduce aides for recess and noon hours by one-third.

One elementary teacher – $27,500.

Coaching salaries – $18,000 cut from $130,000 budgeted.

In-school suspension monitors – $20,850. Impact: Instead of doing homework in monitored isolation, suspended students would be sent home.

School nurses – $22,000. District would no longer contract for public health nurses, who provide health counseling for pregnant teenagers, inspect for lice, teach fifth- and sixth-grade human sexuality and provide nutrition counseling.

Truant officer – $19,000.

Clerical substitute – $1,000. Substitute fills in for elementary school secretaries if they fall ill.

Librarian – $27,500. Eliminates one of two librarians at high school.

Employee Assistance Program – $20,000. District pays $2.50 per employee per month to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for employee counseling on such topics as marital problems and substance abuse. Eliminated.

Supplies and materials – $69,790. Cuts 5 percent of budget for items such as paper, chalk and furnishings.

Resource officer – $21,000. District and city share cost of police officer stationed at high school. Eliminated.

Custodian – $17,000. One fewer, despite new buildings under construction. Impact: Some rooms won't be cleaned every night.

Graduation – $2,000. A 40 percent cut from $5,000 budgeted for graduation costs such as diplomas, ushers, flowers.

Fringe benefits – $9,860. Linked to staff reductions including librarian.

County allocates funds for fly fight

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The county will contribute $10,000 to help control pesky black flies this summer with bacteria, Commissioner Marvin Hemploman said Thursday morning.

The insecticide formerly used to control the flies, also known as buffalo gnats, no longer works because they have developed an immunity to it, said Bob Stoltz, extention entomology specialist.

Last year it killed only 20 to 30 percent of the flies, Stoltz said. The alternative, a bacterial insecticide, however, is many times more expensive than the one used in the past.

State Sen. Laird Noh and Stoltz met Thursday morning with Twin Falls County commissioners and Twin Falls Canal Co. Manager Vince Alberdi to discuss the potential problem.

For years, wool growers and other livestock owners have paid for a treatment program in which the insecticide methoxychlor was applied in the upper end of the Twin Falls canal system, where most of the flies lay their eggs, state Sen. Laird Noh said.

After the eggs hatch, larvae attach to pondweed along the edges of the stream and feed on microscopic organic matter carried by the water, Stoltz said.

Stoltz determines the best time to apply insecticide by suspending 10-foot pieces of ordinary yellow nylon rope in the canal.

The flies lay their eggs on the rope. When they hatch, the larvae attach themselves to the rope. It is during the larval stage that the black fly is vulnerable to insecticide. By checking his ropes, Stoltz can tell when it's time to treat the water and how effective the treatment has been.

The bacterial insecticide is environmentally more friendly but far more expensive. Each application would cost about $4,000, and several applications would be needed, depending on the weather, to control the flies through the summer, Stoltz said.

The commissioners agreed to help fund the control program and agreed that it would be worthwhile to find out how well the new control program would work.

Judge rules irrigation to continue

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE – Salmon Tract farmers probably won't have to worry about losing their irrigation water or paying more for it this year.

A federal bankruptcy judge has turned down a petition to force the Salmon River Canal Co. to either shut off water delivery or increase its fees.

Judge Jim Pappas also put off a decision on whether the firm can remain under bankruptcy protection until September.

By then, the irrigation season will have ended for most of the 170 or so farmers who own shares in the canal company.

Pappas said Thursday that the company, which filed for bankruptcy protection on April 30, has until September to draw up a plan to reorganize and pay off its debts.

A hearing on that plan is scheduled for Sept. 8.

Salmon River's major creditors are the landowners downstream from Salmon Falls Reservoir who were flooded in 1984 and won a $2 million-plus judgment against the company last March.

The company filed for bankruptcy days before the downstream landowners were to begin taking steps to collect their judgment.

After Salmon River began its spring water deliveries, the downstreamers asked Pappas to order the company to either turn off the water or charge shareholders more than the current $11.50 a share.

Each of the company's 60,050 shares is worth 1.167 acre-feet of water, when the seldom-full reservoir has enough water to deliver a full allotment. An acre-foot is about 325,850 gallons.

Twin Falls woman dies in accident on Highway 74

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – An elderly Twin Falls woman was killed in what state police called an alcohol-related crash southwest of town Thursday evening.

Twin Falls County Coroner Gene Turley said he had identified the woman, but did not release her name until relatives could be notified.

The woman was riding in a westbound car on Idaho Highway 74 when a southbound pickup failed to stop at the stop sign at the intersection of 2500 East Road, Cpl. Jay Jensen of the Idaho State Police said.

The accident, three miles west and two miles south of Twin Falls, was reported at 6:47 p.m.

The driver of the pickup, 18-year-old Jeffery Knight of Filer, was stunned by the accident but conscious when police arrived, Jensen said.

He remained in the emergency room at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Thursday evening.

The woman driving the car also was taken to the hospital. She had not been identified late Thursday evening.

The dead woman's sheet-covered body lay beside the road where she had been thrown from the vehicle as it flipped over. Turley found the woman's purse nearby; inside were pictures of small children.

"Apparently she was a grandma," Turley said.

She was the second person to die in an alcohol-related accident in Twin Falls County this week.

Wesley Stapleton, 49, of Twin Falls was killed as he walked along a country road early Tuesday morning. The driver of the car that struck Stapleton, 36-year-old Paul Pena, has been charged with vehicular manslaughter.

Citizens of Ketchum speak up: 'Trim it'

By Stephen Schowengerdt
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM – The City Council heard the first round of public comment on its proposed budget Wednesday night, and while just a handful of residents spoke up, their message was clear – "trim it."

The proposal calls for a 9.3 percent increase in the city budget. The largest expense is for personnel, specifically salaries, benefits and health insurance.

Ketchum city employees did not receive raises last fiscal year, and the proposed budget seeks a six percent salary increase for them (three percent cost of living increases for 1992-93 and 1993-94) plus a three percent merit increase.

The greatest line item budget increases are for sidewalks, 133 percent; and land acquisition and development, 66.7 percent.

"It's an outrage to responsible citizens of Ketchum," said Ed Simon, a Ketchum resident and ex-council member. "It's not responsible and should not be considered."

Simon stressed that at a time when other city, state and federal government bodies are trying to cut their budgets, it is not right that Ketchum is proposing an increase.

He implored city leaders to review the proposed budget line-by-line and do so with the department heads in attendance.

Councilman Tipp Cullen assured Simon "that we will be spending a lot of time on this budget."

The budget increases would be covered by an expected 10 percent increase in Ketchum property tax values by the county assessor, a 12.5 percent increase in sales tax revenue and a 12.5 percent increase in sewer user charges.

"I don't look at this as raising taxes," said Mayor Dan Hamilton. "As inflation moves forward, we have to keep pace."

"Let's not pretend we're not raising taxes," said Ketchum resident Pam Ritzau, also a former council member. "There are some of us looking for relief. The city is one of the best employers in the valley.

"There should be some raises, but there is no reason to play catch up," Ritzau added, referring to the proposed six percent salary increase.

The property tax mill rate levy would not change under the current budget proposal. Ritzau urged the council to consider lowering it. It is currently at .002026, which figures out to $202.60 per $100,000 of property valuation.

The council members and city residents in attendance agreed that the next step was to separate capital expenditures from operating expenses and take a critical look at what it actually costs to run the city and compare the proposed budget with last year's budget.

Public hearings on the proposed budget will continue through August.

In another matter, the council directed City Attorney Ed Lawson to return to the bargaining table and attempt to negotiate a lease proposal with US West NewVector Group Inc. that the city could live with.

NewVector wants to lease space at City Hall for a cellular phone service cell site. The group hopes to bring cellular service to the Wood River Valley before the end of 1994.

The current proposal calls for a 20-year lease at $275 a month.

To complete phase one of the project, NewVector is also trying to secure sites in Hailey and Sun Valley.

Councilman Chip Fisher said he has a "philosophical problem committing to this" when the city may not want to stay in the current building for 20 more years. He also said it doesn't make sense for the city to get into any long-term lease contracts.

In other matters:

- The council voted to increase the construction plan check fee from 30 percent of the building permit fee to 40 percent of the building permit fee.
- The mayor was authorized to execute a lease agreement with the Ketchum-Sun Valley Historical Society for use of the old Forest Service block. The three buildings on the site will be used for an information center, museum and storage area.
- City Administrator Jim Jaquet briefed the council on a Regional Economic Action Project meeting earlier in the day where Sun Valley Mayor Ruth Lieber and Sun Valley Councilman Steve Luber said Ketchum and Sun Valley should explore consolidation of services instead of merging the two cities.

Board passes $13.3 million budget

By Jody Hinton
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY – The Blaine County School Board approved a $13.3 million budget that represents a 10.1 percent increase over last year's budget.

At least 78 percent of the pie is eaten up by salaries and benefits, reflecting an increase of 2 percent over last year's figure for the same expenditures.

Several new positions will be added to the district payroll. Those include a computer aide at Wood River Middle School, two state approved special education aides, a half-time curriculum director, a teacher in Bellevue and an English as a second language teacher.

Additional positions include a part-time preschool teacher for the Developmental Preschool in Bellevue and a part-time occupational therapist.

Treasurer Mike Chatterton said the county is refunded 80 percent of the salary for the state-approved positions.

According to Chatterton, the budget increase allows for a slight increase in the per student allotment to district principals who then determine how that money will be spent.

The allotment at the secondary level increased $15 per student to $140 and the elementary allotment climbed $25 per student to $110, according to district figures. High school allotments were unavailable.

The allotment is based on quarterly enrollment and one-time funds from the state, both of which increased this year.

According to Chatterton, the district will experience a more than $23,000 increase in purchased services, such as utilities and legal fees, primarily because of an increase in rent.

Levy

supplies and staff positions, including crossing guards, from the budget.

The levy also includes $90,000 for three new teaching positions, which would only handle anticipated district growth of between 75 and 100 new students, Donicht said.

He said eight junior high teachers had more than the accreditation limit of 160 students per day this year.

"It's too many," Donicht said.

But more attention has been focused on teacher pay raises than any other issue.

Most district employees this year will receive automatic raises linked to experience, regardless of the outcome of the levy vote. Teachers and administrators can receive an additional raise every time they accrue 15 new college credits or receive a higher degree such as a master's degree.

Donicht said it costs teachers about $1,000 to pay for 15 college credits, and the raises provide incentive for teachers to take classes.

But 94 teachers in the district – 25 percent – have reached experience or educational plateaus and will not get automatic raises this year, said Keith Farnsworth, district personnel director.

Thus, teacher raises this year could vary dramatically depending on the outcome of the levy election.

For example, a teacher making $22,924 with 10 years' experience and only 13 college credits since her hiring would only get a raise if the levy passes. In that case, the teacher would get a 3 percent raise to $23,612.

But a teacher making $18,482 with three years of experience, who has just accrued 15 new college credits, would receive a raise of 8 percent, to $19,952, if the levy fails, and a total raise of 11 percent, to $20,506, if the levy passes.

However, Black said salary is only part of the picture.

The Legislature increased state-paid employee benefits $3 million this year to enhance retirement benefits for Idaho teachers. Teacher benefits will vary depending on their experience and their salaries upon retirement.

A 30-year teacher making an average salary of $30,000 over the last four years of his career, will receive an increase of $62 to $1,313 per month upon retirement, because of the legislative appropriation.

But a teacher with 25 years' experience and the same average salary would get an increase of $52 a month to $1,094 upon retirement. Both are increases of 5 percent.

With the new appropriation, the state will also contribute a higher percentage to the pension per employee, and teachers will receive a smaller penalty for early retirement.

Black and three other local legislators wrote in a letter to The Times-News that during the legislative session, teachers said they preferred improved benefits if the choice was between that and salary increases.

But Dick Chilcote, Idaho Education Association president, and James Shackelford, IEA executive director, say they never said they preferred improved retirement benefits over salary increases.

Donicht said Idaho has the worst retirement package of any state in the Northwest, putting Idaho districts at a competitive disadvantage when recruiting teachers.

But Idaho also pays among the lowest teacher salaries in the country. Twin Falls teacher wages rank 58th of 113 Idaho school districts for elementary teachers and 65th for secondary teachers, according to an Idaho Department of Education study.

"What kind of recruiting tool do you have? Nothing," Donicht said.

The state must increase not only retirement benefits, but salaries too, he said.

Black also said the district has not portrayed state appropriations to local school districts accurately when saying state funding has decreased.

The 1993 Legislature's state public-school budget of $528 million contains a $31 million increase – 6.24 percent – over the budget passed in 1992. The state will also give districts one-time money of up to $5 million from the fiscal year 1993 general account surplus.

While that may be true, Donicht said other factors have swallowed up that funding increase.

The $31 million increase became $29 million when state funds from special taxes such as liquor taxes decreased by $2 million, Donicht said.

Also, $14.6 million of the increase was either distributed by the state or earmarked for specific programs such as special education, which local districts do not control, according to an Education Department budget report.

As a consequence, the district will receive $13.4 million from the state next year, which is $179,672, or 1.3 percent, more than it received this year from the state, a district budget report says.

But that will still be $27,191 less than it received in the 1991-92 budget year, when districts received one-time money for math and science programs. And that is what district officials have publicized, Donicht said.

At the same time, district expenses have increased by more than $300,000 because of the incremental teacher raises and increased costs for insurance premiums.

Fly

could explode this summer. The buffalo gnat – so called because of its resemblance to buffalo – is about one-fifth the size of a common house fly.

Like mosquitos, the gnats need animal blood to complete their reproductive cycle. They particularly bother livestock, said Noh, who raises sheep in the South Hills where many of the flies migrate after they hatch.

The nasty gnats attack the animals' ears and can make them crazy and hard to handle. They also bother cattle and horses, often turning their ears into a bloody mess! And they are suspected of carrying viral livestock infections.

The flies generally don't bite people. But they swarm around and get into eyes, nose, mouths and ears.

Salmon

The downstreamers say the water rights, along with the reservoir and canal system, are the canal company's main assets, and that it shouldn't be allowed to dispose of its water at what the landowners claim is less than its fair-market value.

The company and its shareholders, however, claim that the shareholders own the rights individually.

On Monday, Pappas ruled that, while there's evidence to support the downstreamers' position, there's not enough to warrant issuing a preliminary injunction.

"I'm concerned that this question (who owns the water rights) is one which should not be decided without a fully developed factual record, at this very early stage in the case," he said.

Pappas also questioned whether it was appropriate to fix a "fair-market" price for Salmon River's water, given that the company is nonprofit.

In a separate motion, the downstream landowners asked Pappas to toss Salmon River out of bankruptcy court. They claimed the company is merely using the bankruptcy process to evade paying the judgment.

Karl Joslin, a Salmon Tract farmer and canal company director, testified that after the company appealed the jury's verdict, the board of directors sought to obtain a special bond that would keep the downstream landowners from collecting their award during the appeal process.

But after they learned how much such a bond would cost, Joslin said, the directors decided to seek bankruptcy protection.

"We didn't have the money (to begin paying the judgment), we couldn't assess the money right away, and it turned out we couldn't borrow the money," he said. "We filed bankruptcy to ensure that our company would be able to continue delivering water."

Joseph Meier, Salmon River's attorney, told Pappas that the company fully intended to develop a reorganization plan that would include a way to pay the court judgment.

Lifting the company's bankruptcy protection would be premature, Meier said, since it still had 75 days in which to prepare a plan.

Pappas agreed, saying he wanted to review the plan before deciding whether the company was or was not abusing the bankruptcy process.

However, the judge also ruled that state court proceedings, which had been halted by the bankruptcy petition, could resume so long as the downstream landowners didn't try to collect on the judgment.

Pappas was particularly interested in how 5th District Judge J. William Hart will rule on the downstreamers' motion for interest on top of their $2 million judgment. Hart already has heard arguments on that motion and reportedly was prepared to rule when Salmon River filed for bankruptcy.

Mini-Cassia incomes reportedly rising

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

More Mini-Cassia households might be breaking the $20,000 annual income barrier.

Paul Matthews, chairman of the Mini-Cassia Development Association, said an unscientific marketing survey completed recently indicated that that the Mini-Cassia households making at least $20,000 has increased by approximately 25 percent during the last two years. He declined to say which company performed the survey.

Matthews didn't know how many families the survey estimated made that amount.

Although unscientific, Matthews said it is only one indicator that points toward growth in the area.

The higher salaries would prove to be a benefit in the area, he said.

"It indicates more purchasing power, which should benefit the business community," Matthews said.

Albeit not a tremendous amount, $20,000 is enough money to make a "pretty good" living, Matthews said.

If both husband and wife are working, each earning about $5 or $6 an hour, their combined salaries would total more than $20,000, he noted.

If a recent Idaho Power Co. study proves true, the area could see more growth in personal income.

Lon McDonald of the Twin Falls Job Service office said that the company projects that significant growth will occur in personal income.

According to census data, personal income in millions totalled $252 million per year in 1990. That income is expected to grow to $405.1 million in 1997, according to Idaho Power figures.

Per capita salaries were $13,000 in 1990, but Idaho Power said that was to grow to $18,400 by 1997, according to McDonald.

McDonald said many companies aren't willing to project figures that far ahead.

The population growth for Minidoka County was projected to rise from 19,361 in 1990 to 22,040 in 1997. In Cassia County, the population was expected to jump to 22,040 in 1997 from 19,532 in 1990.

Cassia County's total personal income was expected to rise, Idaho Power said, from $283.7 million in 1990 to $456 million in 1997.

Kimberly company wins bridge contract

Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT – A Kimberly-based company is awaiting the proper permits before beginning construction on the Downard Bridge between Rupert and Declo.

Transportation Department resident engineer Scott Malone said Idaho Construction Co. was awarded the bid to do the project, which was held up temporarily when several snails were placed on the endangered species list. A survey had to be conducted to ensure those snails didn't live where the bridge was to be built.

Idaho Construction from Kimberly submitted a bid of about $1.9 million. Six companies submitted bids.

The bridge will be built near the existing timber bridge, which officials say is unsafe. The new bridge, to stretch over 1,000 feet, will be built from pre-stressed concrete.

Permits will probably be obtained and work will begin in early July, Malone said. It will probably take more than a year to complete. The Transportation Department is requiring that the bridge be finished by Sept. 1 of next year.

The bridge is the main connector between Declo and Rupert.

Explosion artist blasts onto scene with unusual style

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Living with an explosion artist is a real blast.

That's the word from John Coassolo's wife, Raquel. Coassolo is, he thinks, the only explosion artist in the world. Explosion artist, as in blasting paint onto canvas.

When he invented his milieu, Coassolo was living in Arizona. He had graduated from Twin Falls High School and completed a one-year welding course at the College of Southern Idaho. He had also taken a few art classes, and he has an aunt who creates metal sculpture for galleries in San Francisco and Arizona.

Now 27, Coassolo developed his unusual vocation while shopping art galleries in Phoenix. The paintings that caught his eye were the ones that looked liked pop art from the '60s and '70s. The artists had splashed paint onto canvases.

"I decided to combine that concept with my lifelong love of fireworks," Coassolo said.

That's when Coassolo's life began to snap, crackle and pop.

He designed a steel device (welding did come in handy) to allow him to load paints into individual chambers. Blasting caps shoot the paint onto canvas. By varying the size of the charge and by tilting the canvas, Coassolo can paint in dots, streaks or vapor. He can also control the outcome – somewhat.

"Sometimes I don't like the paintings, and I whitewash and redo them," Coassolo said. "But I never touch them with a brush, except to sign them."

That would be wimping out.

On special days, he works in dynamite.

All of this – and yes, it is loud – is done outside city limits.

In some states, Coassolo has been required to obtain a certificate of fitness to practice his art. One area required him to be licensed as a commercial truck driver. He buys his explosives from an equipment company.

In between blasts, Coassolo lives in Twin Falls with his wife and the family cat. Half of his living room is filled with sound equipment, which Coassolo uses when he plays guitar for hard rock bands. He looks the part of both artist and rocker – with long hair, jeans and flashy boots.

Coassolo's paintings, edged in neon lights, cover the walls of his home. People say they look like something from outer space.

They sell for around $500 apiece. So far, Coassolo has been able to "etch out a living."

Coassolo's paintings have names like "Galaxy Sea," "Eruptions in the Stratosphere" and "Double Primary" (as in colors).

Coassolo's father, taxidermist Dan Coassolo of Twin Falls, encourages his son's artistic endeavors.

"My parents have a piece in their house," the younger Coassolo said. "They get a bang out of it."

Coassolo's personal favorite type of art is "something from the future." His personal philosophy involves living day to day.

"Life is short, and I'm having a good time with it all," he said.

A smashingly good time.

Or, as Raquel Coassolo put it, "The Fourth of July isn't boring with this guy around."

Jazz festival replaces usual country events

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Move over Hank Williams Jr. Jazz is invading Twin Falls.

Tonight's "Evening of Jazz" will have them begging for more. At least that's the goal of the Downtown Twin Falls Business Improvement District, whose members have decided it's time for a jazz festival.

"We wanted to try something a little different from country," said the group's executive director Jeanne Wilson. "We hope business people will stay and join us instead of going home after hours."

The event is being designed to appeal to all ages. Some downtown stores will stay open for shopping, and several downtown restaurants will roll out their tables and wagons laden with goodies.

Jan Olsen's Jazz Quartet has been tuning up for several weeks now. One of tonight's featured performers, Olsen's group consists of Joe Kaufman on bass, Jeff Silcock on drums, Denny Pack on alto sax and Olsen (who owns Jan's Music Outlet – formerly Warner Music) on keyboards.

Olsen has been heading up small instrumental groups for the past 20 years, playing for schools, service clubs and dances. Tonight's repertoire will spotlight light, easy-listening jazz. Or, as Olsen put it, "West Coast cool jazz."

Borrowing from the styles of the Dave Brubeck Quartet (circa 1960s) and Claude Bolling, the quartet will play numbers like "Take Five," "Blue Rondo a la Turk" and "Theme from M-A-S-H." A sampling of blues and show tunes will be added into the mix.

Please see JAZZ/C2

'Evening of Jazz' set

"Evening of Jazz" is set for 5 to 9 p.m. today by the fountain in downtown Twin Falls. Music will be provided by Jan Olsen's Jazz Quartet, Pete Crawford's All Stars and the Magichords. Food will be available from Metropolis, Gyro Shop, Subway and Double Decker.

Frankie Valli sound bridged musical gap

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When singer Billy Joel announced some years ago that he was going to write a "Frankie Valli song" in honor of his new bride, model Christie Brinkley, everybody knew exactly what he had in mind.

"Uptown Girl" was crowned by a falsetto to crack the good crystal, but it still couldn't match the original. Frankie Valli, as every guy of a certain age who ever tried to sing along with the radio can attest, was always a step or two above the range of the human voice.

"My style was just something I developed from listening to music," said Valli, now 56, in a telephone interview Wednesday from his Southern California home. "The biggest influence was blues. When I was a kid I used to listen to Dinah Washington and Billy Eckstine, and a blues singer you probably never heard of named Jimmy Scott.

"Then my mom took me to see Sinatra at the Paramount Theater in New York," he said.

For Francis Stephen Castelluccio, a kid from an Italian neighborhood in Newark, N.J., there wasn't any bigger thrill. Sinatra was handsome, successful, a local hero who was also an international icon. And he had taken a style of music — swing — applied his own topspin to it and created his own sound.

"The girls were just screaming — and I loved that," Valli recalled of that concert. "I decided then and there that's what I was going to do — to be a successful singer."

From 1962 through 1978, Valli got his wish many times over with a string of hits that began with "Sherry" and ran through "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Walk Like a Man," "Rag Doll," "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You," "My Eyes Adored You," "December 1963 (Oh, What a Night") and "Grease."

Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons — originally three other guys from Valli's old neighborhood — sold more than 100 million records, including 18 gold and platinum songs and 17 top-10 hits. "Sherry," their signature song written by the fifth member of the group, Bob Gaudio, sold 180,000 copies in a single day.

In 1962 alone, the group had six top-20 songs, including three consecutive No. 1's: "Sherry," "Big Girls Don't Cry" and "Walk Like a Man."

They forged a bankable formula by bridging the gap between the white-bread, crewcut quartets of the late '50s that sang about lost puppy love in four-part harmony and the black do-wop groups led by singers who could tap-dance the octave above high-C without breaking a sweat.

"I learned to sing in school plays and on the streets with my friends. I never had any formal training," Valli said. "But I was fortunate to come along at a time when there was all kinds of music coming from all kinds of sources. Much more so than today.

He still listens to all kinds of music, but he laments the dwindling number of songs — like the ballads Phil Collins, Rod Stewart, and, of course, Sinatra, used to turn out.

"I still do some recording, whenever I find material I like," he said. "You know, good songs. We have a record coming out in August."

It's a second-generation Four Seasons now — the original group parted company in the late '60s — and Valli

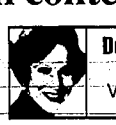
Poor taste in contest sets woman's teeth on edge



Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended our annual mothers and daughters banquet at the church I've belonged to for more than 20 years. (I am 52 years old.)

First, they asked all the women who were mothers to stand up. Then they asked all the mothers who wore dentures to sit down. Then they kept eliminating mothers according to their ages ("All mothers under 30, 40, 50 years old," etc.). The last woman left standing got the prize for being the oldest mother present with her own teeth.

Abby, I have had dentures for a long time, but it was not something I cared to advertise. I spoke with several women who attended that banquet, and they all agreed that the teeth contest was in very poor taste.

I told the program chairman that I was offended by the teeth business, and she laughed and said, "Oh, everyone knew it was just a joke. Don't be so sensitive."

I will leave it to you – and your readers – if you want to print this. How do you feel about such a "joke"?

– NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO TOWN: I agree with you. It wasn't a very good joke. It was insensitive, unkind, and an invasion of privacy. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to ask how to obtain a passport or visa. What is the difference between them? How do you obtain them? I am planning a trip to the Philippines this summer and need this information, and I'm too embarrassed to ask anybody else.

– JUST PLAIN BILL

DEAR BILL: A passport is proof of your citizenship and allows you to leave and re-enter your country. It also offers identification protection while you are in foreign countries. Your U.S. passport will allow you to leave the United States and travel, with the guarantee that you can re-enter the U.S.

According to the State Department's Office of Passport Services, Washington, D.C., "To obtain a passport, contact your local post office, courthouse or U.S. passport office. (A U.S. passport is valid for 10 years for adults.) You must fill out an application, provide proof of birth, pay a fee, and have passport photos taken. Allow four weeks to obtain a first-time passport.

A visa is stamped in your passport and allows you entry into a specific country. In your case, the Philippines does not require a visa for trips under 21 days. To obtain a visa, contact a travel agent or the local consulate of the country you wish to visit. To simplify the process, contact a travel agent for information about both the passport and visa.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer another fractured name? When my wife and I checked out of our hotel in Kagoshima City on Japan's southern main island of Kyushu for an overnight side trip, I left a roll of film to be developed and asked the desk clerk to hold it for our return.

When we checked back into the hotel and I asked for my pictures, they were nowhere to be found!

Finally, a thorough search was made and they were found – filed under "Mr. Hold-for-Return."

'Ariel' features sunken galleons, caves, lots of fun

By Roy Bassave
Knight-Ridder News Service

Video game of week

Formats: Sega Genesis 16-Bit System.

Price, manufacturer: $59.95, Sega.

Recommended ages: 7 and up.

How the game works: This game, based on the hit Disney film "The Little Mermaid," gives the player a choice of becoming either Ariel or her father, King Triton, to battle the evil Ursula's curse and save the kidnapped merpeople. Along the way, you must travel through four levels of underwater adventure among coral reefs, volcanic mounds, sunken galleons and a murky maze of caves.

Good points, bad points: Contains excellent animation and music, including the Oscar-winning hit "Under The Sea." Hints: As you go along, press the "start" button and you'll see a map locating all merpeople you need to save. And beware of sharks! (To kill them, use Triton's pitchfork to hurl fireballs and lightning bolts.) Finally, remember that Ariel's voice can overcome evil spells that imprison the merpeople and other undersea creatures.

The Verdict: As Sebastian would say, "So, mon, go under the sea and have some fun."

Still smoking? Tell us about it

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Are you still smoking? Tell us about it.

The Times-News is preparing an article about smoking and smokers in the '90s, when smoking has been banned in most public places.

We'd like to hear the experiences of smokers in the workplace, on public transportation and in stores and restaurants.

Jazz

But jazz will be the main focus.

"A lot of people (in the Magic Valley) actually like jazz, but many of them have stayed in the closet," said Kaufman.

Added Olsen, "Jazz needs a following."

That's what Olsen is hoping to develop with gigs like tonight's, though he knows how complicated this can be.

"I remember my first jazz trio, at the university in Moscow," Olsen said. "We played in a coffeehouse, and we were billed with a group called Hog's Heaven String Band."

Tonight, Hog's Heaven is far away.

Sharing the stage with Olsen is Pete Crawford's All Stars. The Magichords will also perform.

Valli

spends about half the year on the road with them. The rest of the time he spends in his home north of Los Angeles with her wife, Randi, and their 5½-year-old son, Francesco.

"I don't get into touring like I used to," he said. "After more than 30 years, it's nice to be able to stay home and spend time with my wife and little boy."

Valli says his fans can expect to hear the classics tonight and Saturday in Jackpot.

"That's what people come for," he said. "If we didn't sing them, they'd be angry."

And does Frankie Valli have a favorite "Frankie Valli song?"

"Not really," he said. "I never get tired of singing them."

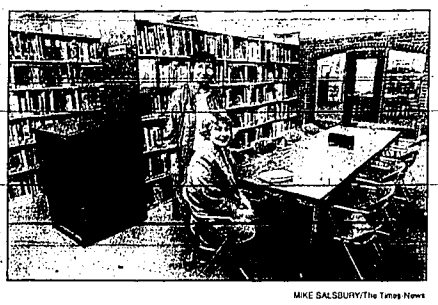
Library launches fund-raising drive

Campaign goal: To raise $150,000 by end of summer

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer



MIKE SALSBURY/The Times-News

Reference librarian Linda Parkinson, standing, and Foundation Executive Marlene York would like to see an improved Idaho and Pacific Northwest History room at the Twin Falls Public Library.

TWIN FALLS – Tapes, microfilm, journals, dissertations – the enthusiasm is mounting as the Twin Falls Public Library Foundation, Inc., launches its first-ever community-wide fund-raising drive.

The drive is titled Idaho History Challenge Campaign, and the goal is to raise $150,000 in money and pledges by the end of the summer.

"We will use the money for designated projects," Foundation Executive Merlene York reported.

Among the targeted areas is the library's Idaho and Pacific Northwest History room, for which the foundation hopes to purchase new research books, journals and dissertations.

Money will also go toward developing and producing local oral history tapes and manuscripts, and toward identifying and training oral history volunteers for the project. Pioneer families will be interviewed.

Additional funds will be used to increase the library's endowment fund.

So far, the foundation board, established in 1986, has developed a fund in excess of $250,000.

"I think this is a major accomplishment," York said. "The foundation helped the library purchase more than 700 books last year."

This year, the foundation is asking for help from area service clubs. So far, Kiwanians, Rotarians, Optimists and Lions are on board.

On Thursday, representatives from the clubs will contact businesses and professional people to ask for donations. That night, volunteers will attend a rally, and the organization with the most pledges will receive a trophy.

But this is only one way for people to contribute. A number of businesses and individuals make donations on their own. Included in the tally is a $1,000 gift from the Optimist Club of Twin Falls.

Individuals who wish to make donations may take advantage of several available giving plans. A donation of $100 entitles the giver to a gold leaf on the library's giving tree. For $300, add in a book endowment, and for $500, add in a quaking gold leaf. Those who give $1,000 receive all of the above plus a plaque on the major donor wall.

Pledges can be earmarked for specific areas in the library, and the money can be paid over a two-year period. Any amount will be accepted, and all pledges are tax deductible.

Send checks to Twin Falls Public Library Foundation Inc., 434 2nd St. E., Twin Falls 83301.

Country singer to appear in Picabo

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

PICABO — The Garth Brooks of Canadian country music, Ian Tyson, will perform during a special barn dance at the Suzie Q Ranch next Friday night, June 25.

Presented by the Idaho High Country Swingers, the dance is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. A limited number of tickets are now on sale, priced at $10 per person.

Like Brooks, Tyson is a top-of-the-charts country singer with a long string of awards to his credit. The Canadian Country Music Association has named him Male Vocalist of the Year three times now, and he was the first in his music category to achieve two gold albums in Canada.

But unlike Brooks, Tyson is a weathered veteran of both stage and stirrup. He learned to play the guitar while recovering from a rodeo accident and started making appearances on the Canadian folk club circuit at about the time Brooks was born.

Tyson owns and operates a ranch near Longview, Alberta, and has paid homage to the working cowboy in his most recent albums, "Old Corrals and Sagebrush," "Cowboyography," "One Jump Ahead of the Devil," and "I Outgrew the Wagon."

Tyson's latest album — "And Stood There Amazed" — includes the hit song "Springtime in Alberta," "Black Nights" and a piece about Idaho's contemporary outlaw, "Claude Dallas."

In the 1960s Tyson was paired with his wife and singing partner Sylvia Fricker. As a folk duo they cut over a dozen albums that included three hit singles: "Four Strong Winds," "Someday Soon" and "You Were On My Mind."

"Someday Soon," which Tyson wrote, hit the U.S. charts when Judy Collins recorded the cowgirl ballad about a boyfriend who "loves his damned old rodeo as much as he loves me."

After Ian and Sylvia broke up, Tyson moved to full-time ranching for several years before re-emerging with the "Old Corrals and Sagebrush" album in 1983 that spurred on his music career.

Tickets for the Ian Tyson barn dance are available at Silverado Western Wear in Ketchum, Epic Travel in Hailey and The Animal Center in Bellevue.

The Susie Q Ranch is located approximately two miles east of Picabo near mile marker 191 on U.S. Highway 20.

Madonna in video stores in 'Body of Evidence'

The Times-News

VIDEO WEST
For rent

"Body of Evidence," Madonna, that pop tart, likes nothing better than a game of "If you show me yours, I'll show you mine" — only hers is suffering from lack of interest due to overexposure. She proves as nakedly egotistical as ever in "Body of Evidence," an utterly silly courtroom drama that pits Madonna's gold-digging dominatrix against Willem Dafoe's conservative criminal attorney.

She's on trial for engineering the death of a wealthy masochist with a weak heart. Andrew, the dead guy, expires in the saddle — she wore the spurs — while simultaneously watching a videotape of an earlier performance. Dafoe is irresistibly drawn to the twisted temptress, who rather quickly trusses him up and pours hot wax in his pants. Later she has her way with him on a car hood covered with broken glass.

New videos

For all the kinky doings, "Body of Evidence" is really an old-fashioned indictment of alternative sexual practices. (Washington Post)

"The Lover," Drawn from Marguerite Duras' rueful novel, "The Lover" is a faithful but soulless account of the writer's girlhood affair in colonial Vietnam. Jean-Jacques Annaud, who re-enacted the discovery of the missionary position in "Quest for Fire," enlarges somewhat upon the boudoir basics in this thin tale of a poor little French girl and the 34-year-old Chinese man who pleasured her.

Carefully choreographed by Annaud, their languid exploits have all the spontaneity of the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace. The director's worldwide search for an adolescent Duras turned up Jane March, an English model. Tony Leung, a Hong Kong-based hunk, plays the Paris-educated businessman who is smitten by mam'selle on the Mekong River ferry.

Though hesitant about approaching a white girl, he offers her a ride back to her Saigon boarding school in his chauffeured limo, and to his surprise she accepts. It is the beginning of a pretty photographed but pitiable affair between the wealthy Chinese man and the churlish little sadist who lords her "whiteness" over him. He tries to buy her love and her loutish family's respect, but they remain bigots even as they line their pockets with his bills and swill his Bordeaux. Meanwhile, his upcoming marriage to a Chinese heiress infringes on their frequent get-togethers. (Washington Post).

"The Cemetery Club" begins with three fiftysomething Jewish couples crammed into a car and driving to the wedding of their friend, Selma, whose multiple marriages and space-age hairdo suggest a garish version of Elizabeth Taylor.

The talented cast, including Jerry Orbach, Olympia Dukakis and Ellen Burstyn, settles into an easy rapport and the movie shows the promise of an amusing ethnic comedy, somewhere between "Moonstruck" and "Used People." (Associated Press)

"Opening Night," John Cassavetes treat, starring Gena Rowlands. (Associated Press)

Also: "Brief History of Time," "Knight Moves," "Miss Rose White," "Guilty Conscience."

On laserdisc: "Body of Evidence," "Mighty Ducks."

The gathering will begin Thursday with a Bolo Benefit extravaganza and the foot of Ruby Mountains. The evening at Red's Ranch will include a celebrity barbecue, stiff drinks, raffles, auctions, plus dancing to the Texas Playboys.

Carl Hayden Daze set for July 4th weekend

The Times-News

JACKPOT – Carl Hayden Daze is set to begin July 3 at Cactus Pete's Resort Casino.

In memory of the casino's late publicist, the festivities will feature attractions like the Carl Hayden writers' contest, the golf club throwing contest and the national hollerin' contest. The public is invited, and all events are free.

The weekend's kickoff event is the Jackpot Firecracker 200 Off-Road car race. It's set for 9 a.m. July 3 just north of the Jackpot Municipal Golf Course, with dune buggy-type vehicles running a 25-mile course four times.

The writers' contest banquet is scheduled for noon July 3 in the Ruby Mountain Ballroom. Each contest entrant and guest will be treated to a free western barbecue and all-you-can-eat buffet. Contest winners will receive prize money ranging from $500 to $1,000.

At 2 p.m. July 3, the hollerin' will begin – in Shoshone Canyon two miles south of Jackpot. Then, at 4 p.m., the golf club throwing contest will be held at Jackpot Municipal Golf Course. Contestants are expected to purposely mis-hit a golf ball, act out the frustration and fling the club as far as possible without going out of bounds or hitting spectators.

At 2 p.m. July 4, the Rutan and Composite Enthusiasts will conduct a fly-over in Hayden's honor. The aerial demonstration will showcase pilots of home-built experimental airplanes, who will fly in a "missing man formation." Prior to the salute, air races will be held from 8 a.m. to noon between Jackpot and Wells. The races will begin at Hayden Airfield.

For Lenny Kravitz, 3rd time's a charm

NEW YORK (AP) — Lenny Kravitz is late for an interview. He doesn't realize it but the street in front of his apartment is closed because Arnold Schwarzenegger is making a movie. Kravitz is waiting for a car to pick him up and it can't get through.

This gets sorted out and Kravitz arrives at his publicist's office, ready to talk about his third album on Virgin Records, "Are You Gonna Go My Way." His first album was "Let Love Rule" in 1989, his second, "Mama Said," is certified gold, and the third looks like it'll sell even more. In only its second week on Cashbox magazine's best-selling pop chart, it hit No. 4 with a bullet.

The cover of the March issue of Details magazine had the words "The Dawning of Lenny Kravitz." They blazed across the dreadlocks, jacket, tie and jeans of the man himself, sitting crosslegged, his eyes and mouth lighted by a smile. The article said, "Lenny Kravitz is creating the rock-soul groove of the '90s," and talked about the new album's "charming hotchpotch of styles."

"It's one of my first major covers in the States," Kravitz says. "I've had lots in Europe and Japan. I think that's going to change. It's not like things are going bad here. But they've been going extremely well in Europe. I think they're a bit quicker to accept something different."

A world tour, to last a year and a half, began last month in Japan.

Will Kravitz be able to cope if success becomes huge? He think so. "I keep that all in perspective. My goal is to be a good musician and to grow. Music is what I want to do my whole life. I'd like to grow and grow and grow and years from now be far more advanced than I am now. The success is nice and I want to enjoy it. It's just a part of it."

Lenny Kravitz is enjoying success in Europe, Japan and the United States with the release of his third album 'Are You Gonna Go My Way.'

Kravitz's concert audience is young. But he isn't afraid to associate with his elders. He opened shows on Bob Dylan's fall 1990 tour. Mick Jagger, with whom he'd performed live twice in Europe, asked him to duet on Bill Withers' "Use Me" on his new solo album.

"It is great to work with people like that, that you admire," Kravitz says. "At first, you're thinking, 'God, this is Mick Jagger.' There is that fan side. Once you're working, it is like that side goes away, I guess maybe because I'm so comfortable doing music.

Mating clams don't have mate

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Q. How do clams mate?

A. They don't. They don't even meet. Quite separately, they release clouds of sperm and eggs into the chilling sea, and if a pair collide to become an incipient zygote, it eventually turns into a larva, down drifted to the sand.

"When you hire people that are smarter than you are, you prove you are smarter than they are," said the sage R. H. Grant.

Wasn't all that long ago when one set of soccer players in the old Soviet Union publicly denounced their team manager. Called him corrupt. Accused him of keeping the money they'd given him to bribe referees.

Beavers' teeth are orange.

Q. Are any inhabited places on earth yet to be explored by Europeans or Americans?

A. None known. Last such was what's now called Papua New Guinea. Western world invaders first ventured inland there about 1904.

If you know the earth orbits the sun once a year, you may be surprised to learn that 45 percent of the people queried told pollsters they didn't realize that.

At least 95 percent of this world's cockroaches scurry around where no humans ever even come close. Jungles, mostly.

Another thing Napoleon Bonaparte did was design the national flag of Italy.

Q. Is cockfighting still legal in any of the United States?

A. In four, at least, at last report. Arizona, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

'Last Action Hero' may not speak to intended audience

By Mark Caro
Chicago Tribune

Dash those expectations of a summer no-brainer. "Last Action Hero" has gray matter pushing through its cranium and spilling out its ears.

Packed with inside jokes, references to other movies, surprise cameos and a sly running commentary about itself, this would-be action blockbuster starring Arnold Schwarzenegger plays like a gleefully explosive, less sanctimonious version of Robert Altman's "The Player."

Movie review

It's also overlong, overstuffed, and much of its humor is likely to sail right over the heads of its targeted youth audience. Yet "Last Action Hero" is a highly ambitious piece of filmmaking that rewards those who keep their balance as the movie repeatedly turns itself inside out.

The story takes its early cues from Woody Allen's "The Purple Rose of Cairo," centering on a boy named Danny (Austin O'Brien) who, with the help of a "magic ticket," winds up on screen alongside his favorite action hero, Jack Slater. Slater is a cop — part Dirty Harry, part Terminator — who is played by Schwarzenegger, both in reality and in the reality of "Last Action Hero." Thus the stage is set for a series of absurd clashes between the movie world and "real world" as depicted in a mass-market movie.

Danny, having feasted on the first three Jack Slater movies, has the landscape of "Jack Slater IV" down cold, and he annoys the supercop with his penchant for predicting plot twists and forecasting Schwarzeneggerly one-liners. He also persistently tries to explain to his hero that he is a movie creation.

As Danny guides Slater through the action-flick formula from the inside, director John McTiernan does the same from the outside. McTiernan ("Die Hard," Schwarzenegger's "Predator") knows the territory well, and he and writers Shane Black and David Arnott (and an uncredited William Goldman) skewer the form in a self-referential style not far from a Zucker-Abrahams-Zucker ("Airplane!") parody. As a character from the movie might say, "Last Action Hero" doesn't just break down the fourth wall — it blows it through the roof.

The clichés are all here: an ever-screaming police sergeant (Frank McRae), a grating rock soundtrack, blatant geography flubs, gratuitous bad driving and cars that blow up at the slightest provocation. In one dizzying chase sequence, a bad guy is shot and goes flying from his car into an ice-cream truck, which, naturally, explodes, launching an ice-cream cone to imbed itself in the head of another baddie.

McTiernan displays the Zucker-Abrahams-Zucker team's fondness for inspired silliness — wait for the gags involving flash cards and trained dogs — and filling backgrounds with goofy details, like the television set behind the sputtering police sergeant that shows explosions, lightning, mushroom clouds, flowing lava and car crashes.

As for the film's inside-joke mania, an early warning comes when Joan Plowright, playing a teacher, introduces a clip from her real-life late husband Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet," informing the students that they may recognize him as Zeus from "Clash of the Titans."

When "Amadeus" star F. Murray Abraham appears as Slater's police colleague, Danny warns, "Watch it: Jack...He killed Mozart." Other sources — ranging from "Roadrunner" cartoons to Ingmar Bergman's "The Seventh Seal" — pop up constantly. The postmodernist mayhem climaxes when Danny and Slater wind up back in real-life Manhattan and encounter Schwarzenegger and actual wife Maria Shriver at the movie's premiere, where Shriver nags Schwarzenegger not to plug his restaurants and gyms because "it's so tacky."

Being confused with his movie-star counterpart is the least of Slater's problems when he and Danny chase glass-eyed villain Benedict (Charles Dance) back into "reality." Slater finds that his hand actually hurts when it punches through glass and that bullets in cars result in holes, not bonfires.

But Slater also gets to hear classical music for the first time, and, much to Danny's dismay, chums it up with his widowed mom (Mercedes Ruehl). "I never just talked to a woman before," Slater enthuses. "It's neat."

Such willful dopiness could never would work without Schwarzenegger's unique, relaxed charm. While Stallone's role in "Cliffhanger" (this movie's supposed, but not actual, rival) might have been filled adequately by some other muscleman, the material here speaks strictly to Schwarzenegger's mixture of gameness and deadpan comic timing.

The round-faced O'Brien does an adequate job of providing the kid's-eye tour, though he can be kind of a pill. The other actors — with the exception of Anthony Quinn's broadly played Sicilian boss — aren't given much rope with which to swing.

McTiernan also maintains a shaky handle on the movie's pace and tone. Some of the early goings-on are disproportionately ugly, like an in-house robbery in Danny's run-down Manhattan home and, in movieland, a sad, bloodied Art Carney serving as victim. In addition, the film is overly insistent in hammering its themes home while only selectively acknowledging that its "real" world is as bogus as that of the movie within a movie.

Ultimately, "Last Action Hero" has too many ideas for its own good, and it still leaves many of them — like the prospect of fetching other movie characters off the screen — underrealized. Still, it's a rare calculated studio bonanza that suffers from an excess of thought. "Last Action Hero" may not come in a tidy package, but it's sure to provide some of the most original laughs of the year. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Ace Theatre).

These are just some of the immortal lines from the immortal films of Arnold Schwarzenegger:

"To be or not to be? Not to be ..."
(Just before blowing something up in "Last Action Hero," 1993)

("Terminator 2: Judgment Day," 1991)

(A headachy John Kimble responding to a student's diagnosis in "Kindergarten Cop," 1990)

"Consider that a divorce."
(After shooting "implanted" wife Sharon Stone in "Total Recall," 1990)

"Danko"
"You're welcome"
(Soviet police detective Ivan Danko and hotel clerk in "Red Heat," 1988)

"Stick around."
(After pinning an enemy soldier to a tent pole with his bowie knife in "Predator," 1987)

"You should not drink and bake."

(After spearing a foe to a boiler with a length of pipe in "Commando," 1985)

"I'll be baaack."
("The Terminator," 1984 — also "Terminator 2" and several other films)

What is best in life? To crush your enemies, to see them driven before you, and to hear the lamentation of the women ..."
("Conan the Barbarian," 1982)

'Last Action Hero' could be a bust

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Arnold Schwarzenegger's new movie is crass, violent and often incoherent. Unlike all his other films, though, this one may bomb.

"Last Action Hero" is the summer's most problematic release, and its performance at the box office could have significant repercussions throughout the movie industry.

Critics already are blasting the movie, which opens today at 2,300 North American theaters, and some notices have been so withering even the chairman of Columbia Pictures has called to complain.

If the $80 million movie flops, it will call into question more than the movie's staggering price tag ($27 million is the industry average). It may force executives not only at Columbia but also at other studios to analyze how big stars can derail projects that once looked good on paper.

By all accounts, the original screenplay for "Last Action Hero," by Zak Penn and Adam Leff, was endearing and original — a novel concept about a young movie fan who enters into the movie he's watching. By the time the script was filmed, however, it had been rewritten several times by other screenwriters into a jagged collage that bears little resemblance to the original screenplay.

The end result is a star vehicle filled with references that celebrate Schwarzenegger's personality. In one scene, the real-life actor and his wife, Maria Shriver, attend the premiere of a movie starring Schwarzenegger's character in "Last Action Hero."

Columbia executives already are conceding that "Last Action Hero" will not debut in first place on the box-office charts. Given that "Terminator" star Schwarzenegger is among the world's top ticket sellers, that's a startling admission — and a testament to the formidable box-office popularity of this season's other action movies.

The Schwarzenegger film was rushed to meet its release date, with the resulting around-the-clock post-production schedule adding significantly to its cost. But all of a sudden, the Friday debut looms as one of the most critical problems for "Last Action Hero."

"Jurassic Park," which opened to record weekend business of $50.2 million last weekend, has showed no signs of slowing down, and has appeal for all the age groups targeted by "Last Action Hero."

The Steven Spielberg film about rampaging dinosaurs set another mark on Monday with $8.6 million in receipts, and on Tuesday collected another $8.3 million at North American theaters.

Furthermore, Sylvester Stallone's "Cliffhanger," which opened on May 28, continues to perform very well with action audiences.

Meanwhile, advance ticket sales for "Last Action Hero" are lagging well behind what "Jurassic Park" totaled prior to its opening weekend.

Some exhibitors already are comparing it to "Howard the Duck," the titanic 1986 flop.

"Last Action Hero" is rated PG-13 in an attempt to broaden the film's popularity. The movie is still rife with four-letter words, however, and the body count runs well into the dozens.

One pre-teen at a Tuesday press preview became hysterical when a "Last Action Hero" villain threw a young boy off the roof of a tall building.

In the John McTiernan-directed film, Schwarzenegger, who was paid $15 million for the role, stars as Jack Slater, a rough-and-tumble police officer in a movie watched by a young Slater fan named Danny Madigan (newcomer Austin O'Brien).

With the help of a magic movie ticket, Madigan is able to enter the movie in which Slater seems to be tracking down some sort of crime ring, although this plot point is unclear.

'Jurassic Park' sets box-office records

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Jurassic Park" sold nearly 10 million tickets in its opening weekend, bringing in $50.2 million and breaking records set by the "Batman" movies.

Last year's "Batman Returns" had held the record for the highest-grossing premiere weekend with $47.7 million.

Assuming an average national ticket price of $5.20, "Jurassic Park" was seen by an estimated 9.65 million moviegoers. "Batman," which opened in 1989, when tickets cost an average of $4.44, collected $42.7 million — or about 9.62 million tickets sold.

"E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," the highest-grossing film of all time, made $11.8 million in its first weekend in 1982, approximately 4 million tickets sold.

Ticket sales for movies released before 1980 cannot be compared because ticket price averages are unavailable and movies debuted in far fewer theaters.

"Jurassic Park" will face competition next weekend from Arnold Schwarzenegger's $80 million movie "Last Action Hero," which debuts Friday.

Last weekend, "Jurassic Park" brought in more money than all of the rest of Top 10 films combined. Second was "Cliffhanger" with $7.6 million; third was "Made in America" with $4.7 million.

"Guilty as Sin" made $3.7 million for fourth and "Dave" earned $3 million for fifth. "Menace II Society" is still playing well in limited release, bringing in $2.6 million for sixth.

"Life With Mikey" was seventh with $2.1 million and "Hot Shots! Part Deux" was eighth with $2.09 million. In ninth with $2.04 million was "Sliver."

"Super Mario Brothers" continued to plummet, netting $1.7 million for 10th. In just a handful of theaters, "What's Love Got to Do With It" turned in $1.2 million for 12th. "Much Ado About Nothing," also in limited release, is running ahead of the "Howards End" pace set last year.

The Times-News

The following are capsule reviews of movies showing in the Magic Valley. Rating is byh the Motion Pciture Association of America and the Los Angeles Times.

Cliffhanger (R). Renny Harlin (Die Hard 2) certainly knows how to direct action, but to appreciate the exciting stunts that Sylvester Stallone and company pull off you have to endure beatings sadistic enough to unnerve the old Marquis and the kind of story and dialogue that would look undernourished in a comic book. Very slickly done but not even John Lithgow or "Northern Exposure's" Janine Turner can give it any dramatic heft. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema)

Dave (PG-13). Filled with amusing situations and clever lines, this bemused look at what happens when a regular guy has to step into the Oval Office and run the country succeeds because of the delicately pitched comic performances of its cast. Kevin Kline, almost unequaled as a farce actor, stars in an Ivan Reitman-directed, Gary Ross-written film that is that rare comedy whose jokes can't be given away. (Twin Cinema)

Guilty as Sin (R). Director Sidney Lumet in a non-lyceum mood. His scenarist is Larry ("Q") Cohen, the movie a teasing sex-and-slaughter erotic thriller, with better characters than usual. As a hotshot female defense attorney and her randy client, an accused wife-killer, Rebecca de Mornay and Don Johnson use innuendo and sex appeal as weapons, ripping, parrying, playing it like "Adam's Rib" between a killer and a shyster. The movie finally succumbs to the usual "erotic thriller" bogeyman-will-get-you cliches, which is a shame. It's on to something better, riskier. (Mall Cinema)

Hot Shots! Part Deux! (PG-13). Charlie Sheen, Lloyd Bridges and Valeria Golino are back for more fun, generated by inspired director Jim Abrahams and his co-writer Pat Proft. This time they send up "Rambo"-type movies, and as before, make us laugh as they skewer pompous machismo. With Richard Crenna, Brenda Bakke. (Twin Cinema)

Jurassic Park (PG-13). The poor little rich kid of this summer's movies. Enormous amounts of money and attention have been expended on making the film's half-dozen dinosaur species awfully impressive (though much too intense for small children) but very little has been done to make any of the puny human beings equally involving. In fact, when the big guys leave the screen, you'll be tempted to leave with them. Another case of $60 million worth of special effects chasing two cents worth of characterization and story. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Ace Theatre).

Life with Mikey (PG). Michael J. Fox gives an affable performance as a former child TV star who now heads a third-rate children's talent agency. Otherwise pretty drippy and over-adorable. Christina Vidal stars as the feisty moppet he spars with. (Motor-Vu Drive-in)

Made in America (PG-13). Sensational chemistry between Whoopi Goldberg and Ted Danson charge this freewheeling romantic comedy about a single mother (Goldberg), an owner of a Berkeley bookstore devoted to African culture, whose daughter (Nia Long) discovers that her father, via a sperm bank donation, is none other than Danson, a flamboyant car dealer. Smart, sophisticated yet with wide appeal. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema)

Sliver (R). Sharon Stone is miscast as a woman who has to be lured into sexual intrigue in this botched erotic thriller that makes voyeurism seem about as exciting as a Cher infomercial. William Baldwin and Tom Berenger co-star. (Twin Cinema)

Districts fare well in finals

By Brad Breland
Times-News writer

FILER — It was almost an even split among all eight districts at the Thursday night performance of the Idaho State high school rodeo finals at the Twin Falls County fairgrounds.

After eight events, seven districts placed hands at the top with District 6 having two on top.

In the bareback riding, Jerome's Shawn McFadden turned in the best ride in the event with a 65. The District 5 cowboy also leads in the average with a 126 after two rides.

Another pair of leaders emerged after the first section of bull riding. Judd Doramus, a Notus cowboy who won the first go-round with a ride of 78, took J3 for a 68 for a score of 146 on two. Judd Mortensen, an Idaho Falls hand who had a 71 in the first go-round to finish fourth, rode Skoal Bandit for a 75. It not only gave Mortensen the best ride of the evening, but also tied him with Doramus for the lead on two rides.

Filer's Kelli McCabe came close to turning the Thursday edition of the rodeo to her favor. She had the best time in the breakaway roping, clocking a 4.153. She came close to having the best time in the goat tying with a score of 9.899. Nampa's Wendy Coon came out on top in that event with a 9.074.

The steer wrestling and team roping event seemed to create most of the problems for the cowboys and cowgirls Thursday.

It took Kenny Billman 6.652 seconds to wrestle his steer after the first four entrants had trouble wresling their steer. The Shelley cowboy broke the double digit times posted before him to have the best time of the evening.

Early leaders say tough U.S. Open course will emerge in later rounds

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. – Americans, not the favored Europeans, did most of the damage Thursday in the lowest scoring first round in U.S. Open history.

But Scott Hoch and Joey Sindelar, who shared the lead with Australia's Craig Parry, agreed the assault on beleaguered Baltusrol was deceptive — and unlikely to last.

"I don't think it's as easy as everyone presumes it is," Sindelar said after a late burst of four birdies on five holes helped him to a 4-under-par 66 and a piece of the lead.

And Hoch, who likened his performance to a duck swimming on a pond — placid on the surface, working furiously below the water line – warned that the leaders can't expect to stay there.

"The course can give up some low scores, but it's a one-time thing," Hoch said. "You won't see anybody shooting real good scores for two days in a row."

Hoch, still on the mend from shoulder surgery that sidelined him much of last season, was in the second group off the tee and birdied the last two holes. His 66 stood up for about six hours before first Sindelar, then Parry matched it late in the day.

In between, 15 other sub-par rounds were recorded — all but two of them by Americans — on a course that was not as difficult as the U.S. Golf Association wanted.

In the absence of rain, the rough was not so thick and lush, and the usual collars were missing from several greens.

1991 U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart studies his shot along the 18th fairway Thursday in Springfield, N.J. He finished with an even par 70, four shots off the pace.

Lee Janzen (67) even made birdie from the rough — something that simply isn't supposed to happen in this event — and was tied for fourth with Craig Stadler.

Baseball playoffs to expand

The Associated Press

DENVER — Baseball owners, making a substantial break with tradition, decided Thursday to double the number of teams in their playoffs to eight starting in 1994.

The owners, feeling financial pressure because their national broadcast money will be cut in half next year, hope to increase late-season attendance and television ratings with the new tier. The change is subject to approval by the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"We're in the 1990s heading into the 21st century and the realities of today are different from 1941," said Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers, chairman of the ruling executive council. "That's hard for some to understand. Baseball doesn't exist in a vacuum."

Baseball had resisted the lengthy postseasons of other sports. Twelve of 28 NFL teams make the playoffs, while 16 of 27 clubs qualifed this season in the NBA and 16 of 24 in the NHL. "The traditionalist point of view, of which I happen to be one, holds us to a higher standard of accountability than other sports," Selig said. "On the other hand, we have a huge body of people who say our reluctance to consider change has been harmful."

The proposal passed 26-2, with the Detroit Tigers and Texas Rangers in opposition. Teams will play a best-of-5 first round with the winners advancing to the league championship series.

After a series of relatively close straw votes, owners put off until September a decision on whether to have the second-place teams in each division qualify or the two non-winners with the next-best records.

New racers visit Speedway Saturday

By Jeff Hoskisson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The Pro Four West Tour, making its first-ever appearance here Saturday, will provide Magic Valley Speedway with its most exciting racing of the season, track promoter Steve York hopes.

"It probably very well may be our best show of the year," says track promoter Steve York. "Going in you never know if it's going to be a close race, but going in, it leads up to be probably the most exciting race of the year."

In addition to the Pro Four West Tour, the Pepsi Pro Stocks and Quale Electronic's Pony Stocks will be racing. Gates will open at 3 p.m. to allow the Pro Four drivers some extra track time. The races will begin at 7:45 p.m.

The Pro Four cars are similar to those in the Pro Stock division but are lighter and one and a half feet shorter, making them faster.

"Speed-wise it's going to be close to as fast if not faster than the Intermountain Super Stocks," York said. "They look like late model cars, and people will have a

Barkley smiles through his game face

The Associated Press

More NBA – D4

CHICAGO — This is the NBA Finals. A rare chance to be a champion. A time when players should have sweaty palms, tight throats and hatred for the enemy in their hearts.

Charles Barkley tells jokes, banters with opponents and wears a big grin. He dines with Michael Jordan in Jordan's own restaurant even though his host is trying to keep him from his long-cherished goal.

"This basketball stuff is just something I do," Barkley said Thursday. "It's my job. It's not the most important thing in the world."

He's on this national stage for the first time and enjoying it. That hasn't changed even though his Phoenix Suns could be eliminated Friday night.

"Desperation?" he asked with an incredulous look. "I don't get desperate about no sporting event, unless I'm on the golf course."

This has been Barkley's best year. A trade to Phoenix gave him a shot at the finals after eight seasons as the star of the mediocre Philadelphia 76ers.

The Suns had the best record in the regular season and he was named most valuable player.

He has been sensational in the playoffs, despite a painful right elbow hurt during a spill in Game 2. He is averaging 29.7 points and 13.7 rebounds.

In Game 4, he had 32 points, 12 rebounds, 10 assists and three steals. That barely got noticed as Jordan scored 55 points, and the Chicago Bulls won 111-105 Wednesday night to go up 3-1 in the best-of-7 series.

A man who doesn't seem to worry about anything isn't worried about being upstaged.

"The only thing that really matters is winning games," Barkley said. "He can have as many points or whatever, but I just want to win the series."

Few people suggest that having a game face that smiles instead of scowls at opponents diminishes his competitiveness.

"You do whatever it takes to win, and I don't think that friendship stands in the way of that," said Danny Ainge, who played in some less friendly finals between the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers.

"We have a relationship that we could joke so much about what's at stake," Jordan said of his golfing buddy. "Yet we know when we're on the basketball court, we're at each other's throats."

American League

"On a day like this, the ball jumps out of here," he said. "And these guys are leading the world in homers, so anything could happen."

What happened was the Tigers hit five homers to overcome three by Carlos Baerga and post a 9-5 victory.

Dan Gladden and Travis Fryman hit two homers each and Rob Deer, just back from the disabled list, had one. Three players with two or more homers in a single game tied an American League record.

"The wind was blowing out there pretty good, and I was seeing the ball really well," Gladden said. "I think it was a combination of both those things."

Mike Moore (5-3) overcame a shaky start to post his second straight victory. He allowed five runs in eight innings on four hits and three walks.

All five runs against Moore scored on Baerga's three homers. "He pitched a good game. I just hit some good pitches," Baerga said. "This is a tough loss, because we really wanted to get a split in here. There are just too many guys on that team that can hit. We didn't pitch to (Cecil) Fielder, and the rest of the guys got hits."

Dennis Cook started for Cleveland, and allowed two runs on five hits in five innings. The Cleveland bullpen, though, wasn't as successful.

Detroit's Tony Phillips, left, avoids the tag of Cleveland second baseman Carlos Baerga who throws to first to force out Tigers' Dan Gladden Thursday in Detroit. Phillips was tagged out trying to advance to third.

Heathcliff Slocumb replaced Cook to start the sixth with Cleveland leading 4-2. He started by walking Fielder and Alan Trammell on eight pitches, then gave up a 465-foot homer to Deer.

After Slocumb retired the next two batters, Milt Cuyler slapped a single to right, and Tony Phillips walked.

Cliff Young came out off the bullpen, and promptly gave up back-*to-back homers to Gladden and Fry*man, making the score 9-4.

"My job is to keep us in the game," Moore said. "Even if I give up a couple runs, I know these guys are going to hit."

Athletics 5, White Sox 2

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Troy Neel, recalled from the minor leagues and added to the roster earlier in the day, hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning Thursday, lifting the Oakland Athletics to a 5-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Bobby Witt (6-4) allowed one run on eight hits, striking out three and walking two through 81-3 innings. Dennis Eckersley finished up for his 12th save as the A's gained a split of the four-game series and denied Chicago a chance to pull into a first-place tie in the AL West with idle Kansas City.

Alex Fernandez (7-4) had control problems throughout his six-plus inning outing, walking a season-high eight. He walked Ruben Sierra and Kevin Seitzer before Neel hit his fifth home run.

Neel opened the season with the A's before being optioned May 31 to Class AAA Tacoma, where he hit .360 in 13 games. He was added to the A's roster Thursday to liven up their anemic offense after Oakland was shut out Tuesday and Wednesday on back-to-back three-hitters by Chicago's Wilson Alvarez and Jack McDowell.

Blue Jays 7, Red Sox 0

TORONTO (AP) — Al Leiter pitched a two-hitter for his first career shutout, and John Olerud tied George Bell's 1989 club-record 22-game hitting streak as Toronto beat fading Boston.

Olerud, who now has the longest hitting streak in the majors this season, got his major league-leading 25th double in the fifth inning off Paul Quantrill (2-5). But Olerud was 1-for-4, dropping from .406 to .404.

Yankees 6, Twins 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly's two-out single in the eighth inning drove in Bernie Williams with the tie-breaking run, and New York rallied to win.

Wade Boggs' sacrifice fly off reliever Larry Casian (1-1) enabled the Yankees to tie the score after Minnesota had gone ahead on a sacrifice fly by rookie Chip Hale. He earlier had three singles.

Bobby Munoz earned his first major-league victory in relief. Steve Farr got his 17th save after pitching out of trouble in the ninth. Minnesota starter Jim Deshaies balked home a run in the second, and New York's Bernie Williams opened the fourth with his sixth homer and third in the last four games.

Idaho Falls player faces rape charge

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A player with the Idaho Falls Braves baseball team of the Pioneer League is being held here, charged with raping an 18-year-old Idaho Falls woman.

At arraignment Wednesday, Eddie Perez, 19, of San Juan, Dominican Republic, was ordered held under $5,000 surety bond or $1,000 cash.

Police said Perez was arrested Wednesday after the woman said she was assaulted at an Idaho Falls hotel.

Braves General Manager Kevin Greene said Perez arrived in Idaho Falls last weekend and was staying at the hotel until permanent housing could be arranged.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled June 29.

Greene said it was Perez' second season with the organization but declined other comment.

Giants dump Reds 5-1 behind Swift's 1-hitter

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bill Swift pitched seven perfect innings before settling for a one-hitter over eight, and Matt Williams had a homer and a pair of doubles as surging San Francisco beat Cincinnati 5-1.

National League

Swift

Swift (9-3) retired the first 21 batters he faced before Kevin Mitchell broke up the perfect game with an infield single, leading off the eighth. He grounded sharply to the hole at shortstop, where Royce Clayton made a diving stop, but Mitchell easily beat the two-hop throw to become the Reds' first baserunner.

Williams doubled twice and homered against left-hander John Smiley (3-9), as San Francisco's NL West leaders won their eighth game in the last 10. For his career, Williams is 14-for-28 with six homers off Smiley.

Pirates 6, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bob Walk got his 100th major-league victory by denying Dwight Gooden (7-6) his 150th win, as Pittsburgh ended a seven-game losing streak by beating New York

Walk (8-5), who had lost his two previous attempts for No. 100, improved to 100-72 over 14 seasons by pitching a six-hitter for only his second complete game in three seasons. Now 77-52 with Pittsburgh since 1984, the right-hander is 5-0 at Three Rivers Stadium this season and 13-3 over the last two seasons.

Cardinals 11, Cubs 10

CHICAGO (AP) — Ozzie Smith went 5-for-5, driving in a career high six runs St. Louis defeated Chicago for its fourth straight victory.

Chicago's Sammy Sosa matched Smith, also driving in five runs with a pair of homers, his fifth career two-homer game and third this year. Dwight Smith had a two-run homer for the Cubs.

Luis Alicea and Tom Pagnozzi had three hits apiece for the Cardinals, pacing a 17-hit attack against four pitchers.

Meanwhile, the Cubs had 19 hits, including three each by Mark Grace, Derrick May, Jose Vizcaino and Rey Sanchez against six St. Louis pitchers.

Rheal Cormier (4-3), won his second straight start, allowing nine hits and six runs in five plus innings as the Cardinals won four straight for the first time this season. Turk Wendell (0-1) was the loser.

Marlins 4, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chris Hammond pitched four-hit ball over eight-plus innings for his fifth straight victory as Florida beat Philadelphia, sending the Phillies to their third straight loss.

Orestes Destrade hit two-run triple off loser Danny Jackson (6-3) in the first inning and the Marlins went on to snap a three-game losing streak.

Hammond (7-4) struck out five and walked two before Bryan Harvey finished for his 20th save.

Astros 4, Padres 1

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Bass delivered a pinch-hit, two-run double in the seventh inning to help Houston beat San Diego.

Darryl Kile (6-1) pitched seven innings and gave up one run on five hits for the victory as the Astros took two of three games in the series. Brian Williams worked two innings for his second save.

With the score 1-all, Luis Gonzalez walked with one out in the Astros seventh off Andy Benes (7-6) and moved to third on a single by Steve Finley. Bass then bounced a two-run double against the center-field fence.

Town seeks heavy armor for World Cup matches

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — If you're going to hold a dance, you have to pay the band. World Cup organizers are learning the truth of that adage in a big way.

The band, in this case, is the police. They will have to keep order on a grand scale: 52 games in nine cities over 31 days involving teams from 24 countries, some of which don't like one another very much.

Security preparations were outlined Thursday, exactly 365 days from the start of the 1994 tournament, and they sounded more like plans for war than for fun.

At a One Year Out news conference in the Silverdome, it was disclosed that:

- The sheriff in Florida's Orange County, where Orlando's Citrus Bowl is located, has requested money in his budget for an armored personnel carrier.
- The U.S. Defense Department is installing a closed-circuit television system for surveillance in the Silverdome.
- Files have been compiled on so-called soccer hooligans the world over, and about 20 were turned back recently at Boston's Logan Airport when they tried to attend a U.S. Cup game at Foxboro Stadium.

Edgar A. Best is in charge of security for the 1994 World Cup. He once headed the Los Angeles FBI office and was head of security for the Los Angeles Olympics.

"We feel privileged to have World Cup soccer come to the United States," Best said.

"We are not out to overpower people with security. We want this to be a very joyous event."

Best said booze might be a problem. Many of the games will be played in stadiums where beer is routinely sold during NFL games.

The other stadiums where World Cup games will be played are Soldier Field in Chicago, the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, the Rose Bowl, Giants Stadium in New Jersey, Stanford University Stadium, and RFK Stadium in Washington, D.C.

Best said that some games will carry a higher risk than others. For example, a game between England and Holland would likely be cause for some concern.

"I can assure you there will be more than enough security forces in the stadiums," Best said. "They won't always be visible. But they'll be there."

Youngster tallies shaky first round at U.S. Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — There were some signs that Ted Oh was indeed just a 16-year-old kid playing with the big boys in the first round of the U.S. Open Thursday.

There was the small, nylon golf bag with pop-out stand, the type preferred by weekenders who lug their own. There was the Bugle Boy clothes.

And there was the trouble he had in the sand and the rough.

But then, again, there were the kid's drives.

The youngster, who got excused from a Spanish test to play in America's biggest golf tournament, didn't hit them all, and he only managed a 6-over-par 76.

But length on the famed Lower Course of the Baltusrol Golf Club, which has four 470-yard par 4s on the front nine alone, was not a problem for the kid.

And from the first tee on, when he launched a 280-yarder to outdistance playing partners Jeff Maggert and John Flannery, Oh, the youngest Open competitor since Tyrell Garth in 1941, showed he could keep up.

He was nervous, both from the pressure of such a big moment in such a young life, and also from the attention, which forced him to tell the front desk of his hotel to hold his calls so he could get some sleep Wednesday.

AP photo

Sixteen-year-old Ted Oh signs autographs during a U.S. Open practice round Wednesday at Baltusrol Golf Club in Springfield, N.J.

"But after I played a few holes I calmed down," said Oh.

The fans, who already knew him from national television and newspaper coverage, shared the pressure, acted more like parents than fans. They applauded him at almost every hole, at almost everything he did. They cajoled the ball.

They forgave Ted his three-putt greens.

"We'll give it to you," someone even called as he chipped out of a nasty spot of shaded rough and within inches of the fourth hole.

By the sixth hole, when he hit one of several poor sand shots but then sank a 12-foot putt to save par, the kid from Torrance, Calif., let loose. So happy with sinking the putt, he threw it into the crowd, into the arms of 14-year-old Michael Bruntz of Middletown, who likes to think "maybe" he could be on the other side of the ropes in two years.

Oh, who started playing golf at 10 and was beating his father, a 5 handicap, within two years, shot the front nine at the famed Baltusrol Golf Club in 35, 1 over par.

And then came the 10th.

He snap-hooked a drive in deep rough under a tree, hit through the fairway and into rough on the other side, and eventually 3-putted, running a 35-footer 15 feet past the hole.

Oh didn't see the triple bogey that way.

"That's the difference between the pro and the amateur," said Oh. "If that were Tom Kite out there he would have never hit it 15 feet past the hole."

Another difference is that few of them would have a 41 for nine holes at Baltusrol, meaning Oh is unlikely to make the cut after Friday's second round.

But the kid had plenty of admirers.

Not the least of them were Brad Sherfy, his coach and his caddie for the Open, and Yung Oh, his father, a former baseball player who came to the United States from Seoul, Korea in 1986 and saw his son winning junior tournaments within a year of picking up the game.

"He can play way better than that, I can tell you that," said Sherfy. "But, hey, he's 16. It's just one step at a time."

Sherfy, who was among those who finished behind his pupil in the California qualifying for the Open, said Oh was about 5-feet-5 and 120 pounds a year ago and driving the ball about 240 yards. He then grew four inches, added 20 pounds, and now hits driver consistently 260-270 yards.

Yung Oh couldn't hide his disappointment with that triple bogey. But he was glad it was over.

"I was more nervous than he was," said Oh, who manufacturers T-shirts ... and golfers. Ted's sister, Julie, is 14 and the junior girls champion of Southern California.

Ted, himself, wasn't too pleased with that triple bogey, and its ballooning effect on his game and temper. He knows he has to be more patient, Friday.

"On the green," he said, explaining himself at 10. "I was mad. I'm 16 years old."

And a player.

Cason 'in a zone' as he bests class field

The 5-foot-7 runner triumphed over a group that included world record-holder and two-time Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis, former world record-holders Leroy Burrell and Calvin Smith, 1992 Olympkic bronze medalist Dennis Mitchell and 1992 Olympic 200-meter champion Mike Marsh.

"The people here have all been in clutch situations before and they had to perform to the best of their ability," Cason said after winning in a wind-aided 9.85 seconds, the same time as Mitchell.

"This is really the first time for me. I'm sure it won't be the last. It's given me a lot of confidence to know I can come here and deliver."

Cason proved his two 9.79-second wind-aided clockings in the prelims were no fluke. This time, he was not as fast — but he didn't have to be.

He seized the lead almost from the outset, then held off a late charge from Mitchell. Although Cason and Mitchell both had the same time, Cason appeared the clear winner.

The wind was 4.8 meters per second (10.73 mph), well over the allowable of 2.0 meters (4.473 mph) for record consideration.

Lewis, owner of the fastest time under any conditions, a wind-aided 9.78, also is the official world record-holder at 9.86. He was third in 9.90.

The top three will represent the United States at the World Outdoor Championships at Stuttgart, Germany, in August.

Although he appeared to leave the blocks quickly, Cason was not satisfied. "The start was very mediocre," he said. "It felt like a training session.

"I set my focus on running down a tube. That's what I did. I can't explain it. I felt like I was in a zone."

Lewis, a notoriously slow starter and tremendous finisher, ran a typical race. He called his start "horrible," adding the "last 80 meters were the fastest I've run in my life."

"I was not as confident as I should have been ... that cost me," Lewis said. "I'm happy to be on the team."

Last year, Lewis, suffering from a sinus infection, finished sixth at the Olympic trials and failed to make the team in the 100, ending his bid for a third consecutive Olympic gold in that event.

Cason also failed to make the team after suffering a torn calf muscle in the opening heats of the trials at New Orleans.

"I feel I'm back, but I still haven't run as fast as I can," Cason said. "I made it a little harder on myself today because I started to press too early. There was not a day I didn't think about the injury."

Gail Devers, the Olympic women's 100-meter champion, won in a wind-aided 10.82, with Gwen Torrence, the Olympic 200-meter gold medalist, second at 11.03, and Michelle Finn third in 11.07. The wind was just over the allowable, at 2.2 meters per second.

Woman presses suit against Magic

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The woman who says Magic Johnson gave her the AIDS virus won't let public disclosure of her name force her to abandon her $2 million lawsuit against the former basketball star.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Richard Enslen in Kalamazoo retitled the lawsuit to include Waymer Moore's name. The pseudonym "Jane Doe" had been used on court documents since the lawsuit was filed in October.

Enslen initially ordered the woman's identity withheld to protect her 5-year-old daughter. But Enslen reversed his decision after Johnson's attorneys argued last month that keeping her name confidential was hindering their case as they tried to learn her sexual history.

"She knew that this day would come and she's ready," said Moore's spokesman, Armstrong Williams. "She feels the hardest part is over and she's ready to go til the end. She refuses to be intimidated."

Moore, 32, was born in Kankakee, Ill., and lives in Lansing. She is a research analyst at the state Department of Public Health's Center for Health Promotion and Chronic Disease Prevention.

Rupert's Lance Rogers had the best time in the calf roping with a 12.011, edging Jake Aragon by less than one-tenth of a second.

Monteview's Rhett Rigby had the best score in the saddle bronc with a 67. His score along with his first ride of 66 gave him an advantage with 133 on two.

Seles attack prompts Wimbledon security change

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The most stringent security measures in Wimbledon's 117-year history will be imposed this year because of concerns raised by the stabbing of Monica Seles.

Video surveillance cameras, undercover officers and uniformed police at court entrances, all used in the past, will be combined with new precautions as part of a stepped-up joint operation between police and the All England Club.

"We have reviewed the security and we have enhanced it where we think necessary in light of certain events over the past year," said Carol Benwell, spokeswoman for the Metropolitan Police.

Police and club officials met for two days last week to prepare for the tournament which begins Monday. Details were not released, but Wimbledon employees say the Seles incident brought a renewed vigilance in preparation for next week, where one emphasis will be on more thorough searches of spectators' bags at the gate.

Seles, then the world's top-ranked player, was stabbed by a spectator during a tournament in Hamburg, Germany, on April 30. Fears of similar incidents, including possible copy-cat attacks, brought about increased security at subsequent events, including the Italian and French Opens.

Benwell said the number of police, stewards and other security people hired by Wimbledon will total around 1,000, the largest ever and a small increase from last year.

"The police have a strong presence at Wimbledon, both plain-clothed and uniformed," said the All England Club's chief executive, Christopher Gorringe, who refused to comment on specific security measures. "We consult the police on all security matters and their recommendations and advice is implemented."

Police are also asking the media not to disclose the addresses of area houses being rented by leading players. "The players feel such information may compromise their safety," said Benwell. "As it is clear from the incident in Germany there are people out there with malicious intentions."

Dad's antics get him banned

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Pierce, the fiery father of tennis player Mary Pierce, has been banned from the rest of this year's women's tour because of the "inappropriate behavior" that got him kicked out of the French Open.

The Women's Tennis Association announced Thursday it voted unanimously to bar Pierce under a new "dishonorable or unprofessional conduct" rule.

Pierce scuffled with a fan at the 1992 French Open and has been involved in other incidents.

At the time of Pierce's ejection from Roland Garros, a report surfaced that Mary Pierce had asked for her father's removal. She refused to comment on the subject afterwards.

Overall, the 156-man field had a scoring average of 72.28 — more than a full stroke below the old mark of 73.40 set in 1989 at Oak Hill in Rochester, N.Y. By U.S. Open standards, the course was there to be had.

But Baltusrol, which gave up scoring records to Jack Nicklaus in 1967 and 1980, the last two times it played host to the tournament, was not completely without its defenses.

Defending champion Tom Kite could do no better than a 75. Masters champion Bernhard Langer of Germany, hampered by a stiff neck, shot 74. Spanish star Seve Ballesteros shot a 76.

And Nicklaus, at 53 attempting to make one more run at one more title, once was at 2-under with the leaders in sight. But he faltered on the back and had to birdie the final hole to match par-70.

York says he expects anywhere from 30 to 40 cars to show up.

With that many cars it will necessitate two main events, a 50-lap championship and a consulation. Drivers will start the evening with qualifying time trials, the top two times advancing automatically to the championship. These will be followed by two heat races with the top 14 advancing and everyone else left to compete in the consolation race for the four other spots in the championship.

"Normally they do this in two days," York said. "They have qualifying and heats one day and the main events the next. This is the only track where they will do it in one day."

Fratello completes Cavs, Hawks swap

Fratello on Thursday signed a five-year deal with the Cavs as the successor to Lenny Wilkens, who resigned on May 24. Wilkens has taken over Fratello's old team, the Hawks.

"There's a very good team here," Fratello said. "There's a new arena on the horizon. There's wonderful fan support and community support."

Fratello flew to Cleveland on Thursday morning, hours after his agent finalized the deal with Cavs owner Gordon Gund and general manager Wayne Embry. Fratello then returned immediately to Chicago, where he is working as a TV analyst on NBC's coverage of the NBA Finals.

Like Riley, who worked as an NBC analyst between his coaching stints with the Los Angeles Lakers and New York Knicks, Fratello said he could not get the thrill of coaching out of his system during his three years in broadcasting.

"As Pat Riley said, there are two things in coaching: There is winning and there is misery," Fratello said.

"Coaching is what I do. Coaching was what I was about.

"It's a completely different feeling being behind the mike, where you are objective, or being emotionally involved each night. I think that's what you miss, the ability to compete."

Fratello went 324-250 in seven seasons with the Hawks from 1983-90, winning 50 or more games in four straight seasons from 1985-86 to 1988-89. His teams reached the playoffs five times.

CHICAGO (AP) — Your move, Phoenix.

The Chicago Bulls made all the right adjustments in Game 4 of the NBA Finals. Now it's up to the Suns to make a strategic counter-attack in Game 5 on Friday night, or the Bulls will become three-time champions.

On Wednesday night, Michael Jordan turned to his inside game and finished with 35 points, the most in the finals since 1967. The result was a 111-105 Chicago victory and a 3-1 lead for the Bulls.

"We had some success going to the hole and we're going to keep trying to do that Friday night," said Jordan, now averaging 43 points in the finals. "I'm pretty sure they'll try to be more physical to keep me from driving, but it could just mean they will foul more often."

Phoenix allowed Jordan to score 12 of his 21 baskets close to the basket, and Bulls forward Horace Grant had eight offensive rebounds, four of which he put back for baskets.

"If we had won the game, it would have been a steal for us because our defense was soft," Suns coach Paul Westphal said Thursday. "We're on the brink of extinction, but it's not really gloom and doom for us because we played terrible defense and still had a chance to win in the last 40 seconds."

Charles Barkley, who had 32 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists, also ridiculed his team's play.

"We're in the West, and you know we don't make guys pay for going into the middle," Barkley said. "We gave up seven three-point plays and we shouldn't give up any."

The Bulls averaged 97 points and allowed an average of 92 in winning the Eastern Conference finals against the New York Knicks. Against Phoenix, Chicago is averaging 110.8 points and giving up 108.5.

"We're winning at the faster tempo, but we've actually had only had success up to a point when we play that way," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "They've continually come back and made runs at us, particularly at the end of quarters. We have let them get back into games. I'd love to get it back into a 90-point game."

Westphal has used Dan Majerle, Kevin Johnson and Richard Dumas in an effort to contain Jordan. He said it isn't individual defense, but team defense, that has hurt the Suns.

"We never said K.J. shut him down in the third game (when Jordan scored 44 points but missed 24 of 43 shots), but Michael likes to manufacture a reason for having a great game," Westphal said. "That's why he's the greatest basketball player ever.

Chicago's Michael Jordan moved inside Wednesday night and scored 55 points. Here he drives over Phoenix's Oliver Miller.

'It doesn't matter who guards him because he's going to beat whoever guards him. We have to provide help.'

— Paul Westphal, Phoenix coach, on Michael Jordan

"It doesn't matter who guards him because he's going to beat whoever guards him. We have to provide help. We'd love to keep him from getting the ball, but we don't have a strategy for doing that. The referees won't let us play a box-and-one or a triangle-and-two."

Majerle said it doesn't matter if Jordan scores 60 points as long as Phoenix has a chance to win Game 5, the last in the series scheduled for Chicago.

"The important thing for us defensively is that we can't let the middle be so available," Majerle said. "The Bulls say they want a slow tempo, but they like to get out and run and play the transition game. They obviously can play that way. What we want to do is make teams adjust to us."

The Bulls can become the third franchise in NBA history and the first since the 1960s to win three consecutive titles. No team has ever come back from a 3-1 deficit to win the NBA Finals.

"We're trying to do something that hasn't been done in awhile," Jordan said.

"It really hasn't been heard of in today's basketball, in terms of the competition and the parity that's within the league. It's a goal I set for myself to achieve through a team concept."

Jordan says one reason he's determined to win three straight titles is because it's something that eluded Magic Johnson and Larry Bird.

"I think it's an individual driving force for me," Jordan said.

"I think everybody needs challenges, and this is a chance for me to accomplish something that they haven't. Magic won five championships, but to win three in a row is something he has never done."

Firms make play for arena sponsorships

PHOENIX (AP) — One local company has more than sentimental reasons to root for the Phoenix Suns in the NBA Finals. America West Airlines gets a plug on national TV every time the cameras pan the court in the arena that bears the airline's name.

The Chicago Bulls will soon be bashing the backboards under a corporate logo too, and so will the Washington Bullets. United Airlines is paying to put its name on the Bulls' new home while, it was announced Thursday, Washington's Capital Centre will become the USAir Arena.

United and USAir join the ranks of corporate sponsors — among them banks, an oil company and a discount store chain — that have paid big money to get their names of hockey and basketball venues. It's a trend pushed by ad managers on the lookout for a new gimmick and welcomed by team owners looking for ways to finance better arenas.

Analysts say it's hard to calculate the advertising value of such sponsorships, but the companies clearly think they're worth big money.

Phoenix-based America West put on a full-court press in bankruptcy court last year to preserve the $26 million, 30-year deal that makes the Suns' home the America West Arena.

The deal is already bearing fruit with the Suns' underdog playoff challenge to the Bulls in the arena's inaugural season, said Mark Coleman, a former America West senior vice president who helped draft the deal.

"It's probably paid for itself for many seasons," Coleman said.

Coleman figures that in a non-playoff year, the arena sponsorship would have an ad value of $5 million. That's based on the theory that mentions of the name during a typical game broadcast would be worth two 30-second commercials.

Now the returns are multiplied as playoff broadcasts in millions of homes flash the airline's logo, which is plastered on the floor, walls and roof of the arena, across the country.

That kind of exposure is invaluable to a regional airline looking for name recognition. "In order to get somebody to call you, they have to know you exist," Coleman said.

Bulls, city look to quell rioting in case of win

CHICAGO (AP) — This year there have been rampages after the Super Bowl, the NCAA basketball championships and the Stanley Cup finals.

Next up is the NBA.

In the last two seasons, with the Chicago Bulls winning the title each time, violence followed the championship. The Bulls can clinch a third straight title Friday night by beating the Phoenix Suns.

This time, Chicago has spent $1 million on public-service announcements and added police protection to prevent a repeat of the mayhem.

"Michael Jordan and Charles Barkley are fierce competitors," Chicago mayor Richard Daley said. "But as they leave the court, they respect one another. That's all we're asking for."

In an ad unveiled Thursday, Jordan says: "If we make it a three-peat on the court, let's not make it a repeat on the streets."

Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf appealed to civic pride, asking citizens to set themselves apart from those in other cities.

"Winning is supposed to be a time of joy, not a time of sadness," he said. "Let's send a message to Montreal and Detroit and all those other cities that Chicagoans know how to celebrate with style."

After the Bulls' first championship in 1991, more than 100 people were arrested and dozens of stores were looted.

The next year, police put hundreds of extra officers on the streets for the title game. Bars were asked to serve drinks in plastic cups and were ordered closed hours earlier than normal. Jordan and Police Supt. Matt Rodriguez begged residents to behave.

All that had little effect. There were 1,060 arrests, 107 police officers injured, more than 340 businesses looted. Several fires were set.

Cabs were overturned and police cars damaged. Rioters did almost $10 million in damage.

"Make no mistake," Rodriguez said Thursday. "If you break the law, you will be celebrating in jail."

The plan this year: Put more police on the streets, ask bars to serve drinks in plastic cups and plead for calm. The lone new element: the public service announcements, which psychologists don't think will have much effect on people in large groups.

"Groups sort of take on a life of their own and people do things that as an individual they would never do," said Linda Heath, psychology professor at Loyola (Ill.) University who has studied the relationship between television and violence.

Bar owners along Division Street, a popular nightlife area struck by violence last year, have agreed to use plastic cups and keep reporters and camera crews off their roofs to avoid attracting larger crowds, said Kim Kohls, promotions manager with Lodge Management, which runs five bars in the area.

"Hit me," Barkley joked, "I'll be rich."

Then they had dinner together at Jordan's new downtown nightspot.

Barkley also had a chummy encounter with Chicago's Scott Williams at the end of the second overtime of Phoenix's triple-overtime Game 3 victory. He smiled and spoke to his foe.

"He asked me how tired I was, if I was as tired as he was," Williams recalled. "That's the way he is. He was out there having fun. That's the most important thing."

There's also a fierce competitive streak.

"Spoiler?" he said of a suggestion that Phoenix was focusing on ruining Chicago's drive for a third straight title. "We're not trying to spoil it. We're trying to win it ourselves.

"I always feel we're going to come back and win. I have tremendous confidence."

Press takes glimpse of Aidid's lair

The Washington Post

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Two days after the brutal ambush slaying of 23 Pakistani peacekeepers June 5, the man widely considered to have orchestrated the attack, Mohamed Farah Aidid, relaxed cross-legged on a soft red carpet.

He sat in a spacious meeting room with walls decorated by velvet arras depicting African wildlife scenes.

"I don't believe we will be attacked," Aidid boasted confidently, twirling his cane.

But attack they did, 10 days later. Thursday, that same sprawling stucco villa where the warlord defiantly entertained foreign reporters lay bomb-damaged and littered with debris. With Aidid now on the run, Pakistani troops gleefully took reporters on a tour of his inner sanctum, including what is believed to be Aideed's bedroom.

Next to the double bed stood a long wooden table with two glasses on a serving tray, saucers and a bowl of sugar as if his last meal there had been capped by sweet tea. Next to the bed were several disorderly piles of books, which provide some insight into the warlord's reading pleasure.

One pile was topped by a thin academic tome, "Portraits of Chinese Women in Revolution." Beneath it was a game book, "The Money Puzzle."

There were several copies of the Koran, in Arabic script and in different shapes and sizes, and a thick history book, in Italian, called "The Italians in Africa."

Atop another small stack was a thin paperback that the warlord would find useful if he is ever apprehended, and if his trial were to be held on American shores; it's called, "The Beginner's Guide to the U.S. Constitution."

Next to the bed was an indication of how Aidid managed to rest during four nights of deafening shell and missile attacks: a pair of pink earplugs.

Aidid appears to be an incessant pill popper, according to the evidence of his nightstand and desk drawers. There are boxes of aspirin, and other pain killers, sheets of anti-dehydration tablets, cold medicines and even iron supplements.

The warlord's bathroom also provides insights into his personal grooming tastes: he prefers Colgate regular flavor (several containers), Edge shaving gel and a splash of Italian Acqua de Selva eau de cologne on his clean-shaven face.

U.S. and Pakistani military officers spent much of the morning combing through the compound, which Aidid used not only as a residence but also as a headquarters barracks from which he ran his United Somali Congress-Somali National Alliance militia.

They carted off boxes of documents, letters and papers from the main house, much of which they hope can be used to implicate the warlord in any future U.N. tribunal.

Also discovered on the grounds outside the main house was an untold quantity of weapons and ammunition, U.S. officials said.

What they missed — and what reporters later discovered — were several personal notebooks and address books that list the names of contacts in places such as Riyadh, London and Cairo. One old book contained shorthand notations under the heading "urgent request," which include two rocket-propelled grenade launchers, tanks, medicine and other equipment.

Sections of the house were destroyed by the 105mm shells fired from the cannons of American AC-130 planes. On the upper floor is a spacious outdoor veranda where the warlord occasionally had set up lawn chairs and held large press conferences; some of the shells blasted through that veranda, leaving gaping holes.

The stairs leading up from the ground level were also badly damaged during the aerial pounding.

The house is littered with debris and broken glass, even the once-immaculate, red-carpeted meeting room where visitors used to be told to remove their shoes for fear of soiling the carpets.

Thursday, Pakistani soldiers tromped freely across the carpet in their boots, and they set up machine-gun positions looking out over the dusty street outside.

Aggressive peacemakers

U.N. moves beyond passive military role, especially in Somalia

By R.C. Longworth
Chicago Tribune

With its assault on Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the United Nations has taken a big step toward filling its new and uncomfortable role of world policeman.

Analysis

The U.N. operation in Somalia (UNOSOM-II) is the first truly multinational force in U.N. history with powers not only to keep the peace, but also to use offensive power to make peace and punish aggressors.

Attacks on Aidid that started over the weekend and continued Thursday were the first major use of those powers -- not a self-defense operation but a calculated use of overwhelming firepower to pound a foe.

The raids were conducted to avenge the deaths of 23 Pakistani troops in battles with Somali gunmen.

Since the end of the Cold War, the United Nations has moved into many world trouble spots formerly policed by the superpowers.

In each of these trouble spots -- Cambodia, Yugoslavia, El Salvador -- the United Nations has had to make up the rules as it went along, setting precedents with every decision.

But each of the other missions is what the United Nations calls a "Chapter Six" operation. The term means that lightly armed U.N. soldiers move in with orders, laid down by the Security Council under Chapter Six of the U.N. Charter, to keep the peace, supposedly with the consent of all sides, after a truce has been reached.

Under Chapter Six, U.N. soldiers can shoot back in self-defense or to protect their own equipment. Offensive action is taboo.

U.N. troops in the former Yugoslavia have only Chapter Six powers, which is one reason they've been so helpless in the face of broken promises and renewed violence.

Somalia is different. The 500 Pakistanis who went there last year had only Chapter Six powers and spent most of their time pinned down by a civil war they were powerless to stop.

The second phase -- the landing of troops in December to end the civil war and protect food deliveries to starving Somalis — was essentially a U.S. operation under U.N. cover, much like the Persian Gulf War.

UNOSOM-II is the third phase in Somalia, and it's a true multinational force, under the command of a Turk, Lt. Gen. Cevik Bir, involving troops from 21 nations. The United States provides 4,000 of the 18,000 troops.

The Americans there say they're not trying to run the show, but when the shooting at Aidid began, it was U.S.-led and U.S.-armed.

The Security Council sent UNOSOM-II with a Chapter Seven mandate, which means the troops in Somalia now are peacemakers, not peacekeepers.

It's a big difference and reflects the United Nations' realization that there is no peace to keep.

Instead, the Security Council told UNOSOM-II to pacify Somalia in any way it saw fit, recognizing that it might have to carry out offensive operations to get the job done.

UNOSOM-II moved with tanks, armored personnel carriers, machine guns and rockets and can call on even heavier artillery, such as the U.S. gunships recently used, if it needs them.

There is no government in Somalia, so the United Nations didn't seek anybody's consent.

"We are moving into an entirely new world — absolutely, absolutely," said Kofi Annan, assistant the U.N. secretary-general for peacekeeping operations.

These new U.N. powers "will be seen by historians as a turning point," said Shashi Tharoor, an official in the peacekeeping section at U.N. headquarters in New York.

"In the Cold War," Tharoor said, "peacekeeping was limited to places where the superpowers let us play a role. Our soldiers were backed by the U.N.'s moral force and applied techniques that didn't require military force."

Usually, this worked. Occasionally, in the Congo and in Lebanon, it didn't.

"Now we're getting thrust into a situation where no solution is in sight," Tharoor said. "We are peacekeeping where there is no peace to keep. You go in with weapons to enforce a peace. This has never been done under the secretary-general's command before."

Commanding a multinational force involves obvious problems of differences in languages and training. But Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Montgomery, the Indianapolis native who is deputy commander of U.N. forces in Mogadishu, said the big difference is in going through channels to get orders obeyed.

Giving orders to soldiers from 21 nations is not like commanding an all-U.S. force, Montgomery said.

"That's life in the U.N.," he said. "You can't just turn to somebody and tell them to go do this or that. You have to go to their national authorities and have discussions about it."

When the order involves an offensive operation, such as the assault on Aidid, "this is a complicating factor," the general said. "The facts of life in the international military is that you think and coordinate before telling somebody to do something," he said.

Current U.N. peacekeeping operations

In 1948, the U.N. sent peacekeeping forces to oversee the strained peace in the Sinai Peninsula. Since then, nearly half a million troops have been sent on 26 missions throughout the world. Over 900 of them have lost their lives.

Hot spots

Bosnia, Croatia, Serbia and Macedonia
U.N. peacekeeping forces were sent to these regions because of a brutal civil war in the former Yugoslavia. Troops have been sent to Macedonia to keep fighting from spreading to that region. The U.N. Security Council must now decide how to protect "safe areas" declared for Bosnian Muslims.

Somalia
U.N. forces were sent because of a civil war that lead to mass starvation. The war began after longtime President Mohamed Siad Barre fled the country and tribal warlords vied for power. The U.N. units encountered bloody resistance from one faction as they tried to disarm it.

Cambodia
U.N. troops were sent to maintain peace after an agreement was signed between three guerrilla groups and the Vietnam-installed government and to supress returning anti-government rioting. A civilian U.N. contingent, meanwhile, organized elections that were held in late May.

Personnel includes troops, observers and civilians. Figures through April 30, 1993.

U.N. attacks compound; Aidid not found

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — U.N. troops hit rebel warlord Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid with a daylong air and ground assault Thursday.

Aidid fighters struck back using women, children and hospital patients as human shields, the U.N. said.

Five U.N. peacekeepers died and 44 were injured in the biggest U.N. military strike since the Korean War, said a U.N. spokesman in New York.

But Aidid, who is accused of orchestrating a June 5 ambush that killed 23 Pakistani U.N. peacekeepers, escaped from his headquarters despite a cordon of multinational soldiers, including Americans.

U.N. troops came under relentless sniper fire during the assault to crush Aidid's military power and bring him to justice.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills accused Aidid's gunmen firing at U.N. troops from behind hospital patients at Digfer Hospital, near Aidid's home and office. Aidid was reportedly within the hospital compound, said a U.N. source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

He said U.N. forces in the field reported that Somali foes with hand grenades "hid behind women and children until they were within throwing distance" of U.N. troops.

Aidid was reported holed up with a large band of militiamen at the hospital, which lies on a low hill less than a mile from his home and office.

Sills reported that four Moroccan troops were killed, including a lieutenant-colonel, and 37 were wounded; one Pakistani was killed and three wounded, and three French soldiers wounded, plus the American.

He said "the circumstances concerning the casualties was far from certain," although the Moroccons came under fire from demonstrators. He said "it will take considerably longer" to establish Somali casualties.

Somali casualties could easily range into the hundreds, given the firepower used by the multinational force. The day's fighting engulfed much of the southern half of this seaside capital of 1 million people.

Earlier, a doctor at a field hospital run by Moroccan U.N. troops said it was swamped with wounded U.N. soldiers and sent some of them to the U.S. Army's 42nd Field Hospital because it didn't have enough doctors to treat them.

Col. Artie Shelton, commander of the U.S. Army hospital, said his doctors had treated dozens of wounded U.N. troops.

Two missiles fired by Cobra assault helicopters hit the compound of a French aid agency, International Action Against Famine, killing one Somali worker and wounding seven, said Joelle Tanguy, the head of Doctors Without Borders in Somalia.

American and Pakistani soldiers stormed the general's two-story, stucco home and office at mid-morning, only to find the shattered building deserted.

A house-to-house search was begun, but by nightfall Aidid remained on the loose.

"It is my feeling that Gen. Aidid, at this point, is a threat to Somalia and to the international community and that he must be detained," Adm. Jonathan Howe, the U.N. special envoy, told reporters later. "I hope he will give himself up peacefully."

Aidid also has been held largely responsible for the deaths of more than 350,000 fellow Somalis last year from famine and disease caused by a clan war he launched in a quest for power.

Through the night and early morning, American AC-130 gunships and Cobra helicopters fired on the neighborhood where Aidid and two of his closest allies live, raking the area with rockets and shells.

Before daybreak, Italian, French, American, Pakistani and Moroccan soldiers blocked the area off with tanks and armored personnel carriers. As they moved in, they got into a fierce firefight with Aidid's supporters.

At dawn, the U.N. forces closed in on the single block of homes that housed Aidid, Col. Omar Jess and Osman Atto, plus dozens of their mostly young, untrained militiamen.

Cobras whirled overhead, striking with TOW missiles and machine-gun fire as the troops advanced.

Associated Press photographer Hansi Krauss, accompanying the assault, said several Somali gunmen were found huddled inside the walls surrounding Aidid's compound. They appeared to be in shock and offered no resistance.

Trade deficit hits worst level in 4 years

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit widened marginally in April to $10.487 billion from a revised $10.453 billion in March, mostly in reflection of the deteriorating economies of the main U.S. trading partners, analysts said Thursday.

The wider trade shortfall caught most analysts by surprise since many had anticipated a rebound in exports; in a largely technical correction from the blizzard that dampened U.S. business activity in March.

But such rebound failed to occur as U.S. exports unexpectedly fell 1.3 percent in April to $38.383 billion as broad-based declines in the key capital goods sectors more than offset gains in auto exports.

Ahead of the data, the median estimate of economists surveyed by Knight-Ridder Financial News had called for a $8.5 billion April shortfall, in a range from $9.6 billion to $8.2 billion.

"The trade deficit widened as the economies of the U.S. main trading partners, including Canada and Mexico, slowed down, and secondary exports markets such as in Southeast East Asia and Latin America were also witnessing slower growth," said senior strategist Marc Chandler at IDEA.

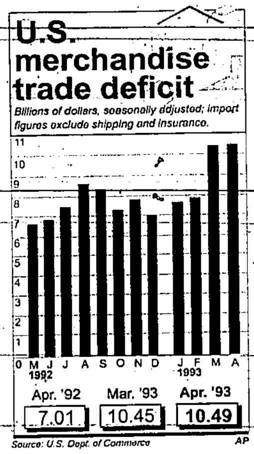
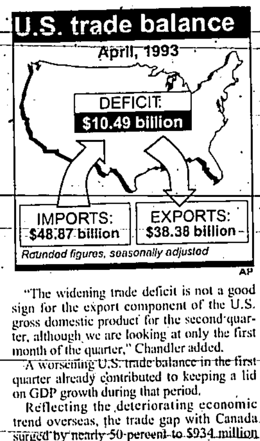
Not only was the April trade shortfall the largest since $10.805 billion in December 1988, but it pushed the U.S. trade deficit for the period January through April to $36.516 billion — the largest gap for that period since $40.9 billion in 1988.





"The widening trade deficit is not a good sign for the export component of the U.S. gross domestic product for the second quarter, although we are looking at only the first month of the quarter," Chandler added.

A worsening U.S. trade balance in the first quarter already contributed to keeping a lid on GDP growth during that period.

Reflecting the deteriorating economic trend overseas, the trade gap with Canada surged by nearly 50 percent to $934 million in April from $661 million in March, while the trade surplus with Mexico narrowed to $264 million from $299 million.

But, once again and as expected, the main bilateral deficit was recorded with Japan, at $5.496 billion, up from $5.263 billion in March — and the largest bilateral gap since $5.54 billion in October 1987.

The deficit with Japan further challenged the theory that a weaker dollar would help improve the U.S. trade balance with the leading Far Eastern exporting nation.

Although the U.S. currency was already steadily declining against the yen in April, this did not help reduce the shortfall with Japan because it just took more dollars to acquire Japanese goods, analysts noted.

On a nation-by-nation basis, the United States ran its second worst trade deficit with China at $1.492 billion, up from the previous record set in March at $1.461 billion.

The trade gap with China has been nicknamed by some economists the "silent deficit" since the United States mostly imports cheap goods from Beijing that are not produced in the United States — therefore not seen as taking jobs away from American workers.

The bottom line is that the US trade deficit for all of 1993 will most likely top 1992's $84 billion shortfall by about $12 billion, analysts agreed.

If the current trend does not slowdown, the U.S. trade deficit could even exceed $100 billion by the end of the year.

Exports are not likely to make major inroads, though, because the trade surplus that the United States still maintains with Western Europe — $450 million in April, up from $437 million in March — is likely to shrink as recession deepens on the continent.

Economic confidence dips among businesses

WASHINGTON — Business executives' confidence in the economy plunged in June, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce said Thursday.

It was the steepest drop recorded in the two years that the business lobby group has been conducting a bimonthly survey of its members.

The decline reflected, the group said, "a growing disenchantment with the economic uncertainty caused by the prospects of higher taxes for deficit reduction and health care reform."

"Small businesses in general are much more pessimistic than they were four or five months ago. They just don't know where things are going, and they feel that they ought to," said Martin Regalia, the Chamber's chief economist.

The business confidence index fell to 47.7 percent in June, down from 59.3 percent in April and 62.4 percent in both February and December 1992. It was the lowest level since 39.3 in December 1991, when the economy had only recently emerged from the recession.

An index reading of 50 or more indicates moderate economic growth. A reading of 70 or more indicates strong growth.

Investors in proposed Idaho bank will get money back

POST FALLS — People who invested in a proposed community bank at Post Falls will get their money back after the organizers decided against seeking a state bank charter because they couldn't raise $3 million in start-up capital.

Dann Geittman, who was to be president of the planned Community Bank of Post Falls, declined to say how much was raised, but said it all would be returned to investors.

"They won't lose a penney," he said.

He said organizers will spend the rest of June closing down operations at the bank's offices. Backer said the bank, which was to begin operations in July, would have provided more flexibility to customers than larger regional banks in Post Falls and Rathdrum.

"Even though there are other banks in Post Falls, we would have provided something more to the community," Geittman said. "We would have filled a niche."

Food, Drug sleuths ferret out Pepsi facts

The Associated Press

'I've worked on some cases where it was obvious it was a hoax, but you couldn't prove it.'

— Jack Rosette, Atlanta packaging consultant

Investigators with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration normally spend months tracking rat droppings or insect parts in food. They hunt through factories and convenience stores, squint at food labels searching out meaning in production code numbers.

For the last week they have been stocking up on Pepsi cans and an assortment of syringes, needles and other hardware allegedly found in the soft drink containers.

For all the attention, it's still the routine.

"It's like any other detective work," said Ballard Graham, director of investigations at the FDA's Philadelphia district office. "You're always going out there following leads."

Scores of FDA investigators have fanned out across the country this week, responding to at least 50 reports of foreign objects in Pepsi products in 23 states. While at least seven cases have turned out to be hoaxes, investigators are mandated to check out each report. "You never go into an investigation with prejudgments," said Graham, an FDA investigator for 17 years. "You go in with the information before you. Then you can start making an assessment when the physical evidence doesn't corroborate with the facts that are reported to you."

Graham and other FDA officials are closed mouthed about the specifics of the Pepsi investigations; they cite fears that too much information will incite even more copycat responses.

But those familiar with the process say the detectives are following the routine of any criminal investigation: interviews, legwork, and high tech laboratories are all employed to see if a product has been adulterated, and by whom.

"These investigations can be very time consuming," said Jack Rosette, an Atlanta packaging consultant who has trained federal investigators. "I've worked on some cases where it was obvious it was a hoax, but you couldn't prove it."

But the since the Tylenol scare of 1982 where seven people in the Chicago area died from cyanide-tainted capsules, federal investigators have been armed with tougher laws and better training to ferret out those who tamper with consumer products — and those who make false claims.

The 1983 Federal Anti-Tampering Act requires the FDA to take the lead in any investigation of product tampering. The law also gave the FBI jurisdiction.

Among those involved in this week's investigations are special agents from the FDA's Office of Criminal Investigation, a new division established last year by Commissioner David Kessler to handle serious cases.

The agents, and many other investigators, have received training at the federal criminal investigations school in Glynco, Ga.

The investigators also wield laws with stiff penalties. Federal convictions carry maximum penalties of five years in prison and $250,000 fines. Four people have been arrested in California, Illinois, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

The tough fines and more sophisticated investigations have had an effect. In 1983, the FDA received 874 reports of product tampering; of those, 137 cases were confirmed.

The trend has been downward. Last year, the FDA investigated 230 cases; only 48 were confirmed. "A majority turn out not to involve tampering," Adams said. "Usually it's a product that's been damaged, or the result of a manufacturing problem."

Investigations begin with reports from various sources: individual consumers, local law enforcement, even the media. FDA investigators talk to the person making the complaint. They examine the tainted prod-

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Not that the story need be long, but it will take a long while to make it short."

— Henry David Thoreau.

"My gosh, what a defense!" shrieked a bewildered South. "Where did he find that lead? Doesn't anyone lead partner's suit anymore?"

Look over the play to see if you have any sympathy for South.

West found the inspired lead of the diamond ace and continued the suit after East signaled with the nine. East cashed the king and gave West a diamond ruff. A belated heart lead went to dummy's king. South's heart ace was cashed, a heart was ruffed in dummy, and dummy's trump ace brought the eight from West. South led a second trump to his king in hopes of dropping the queen, but that didn't work. East scored his trump queen, and the game went one down.

Should South have made his game or was he the victim of an inspired opening lead?

After South wins dummy's heart king, it can cost him nothing to cash dummy's club ace next. When East drops the king, South ruffs a club (to check on skulduggery), but East is too shrewd to ruff. No matter; South soon has the answers. When he cashes his heart ace and ruffs a heart, the distribution becomes clear. East started with five hearts, four diamonds and one club; therefore, he must have three spades. South cashes dummy's spade ace and follows with a confident finesse to land a tricky game.

What was West's reason for the unusual lead? "They bid with so much confidence that I felt sure I had to resort to something drastic," was his reply.

Face to Face, Eye to Eye with CBS' Connie Chung

By Scott Williams
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Her offices for "Eye to Eye with Connie Chung" are so new that plastic-wrapped couches stand on end like doll furniture and the whole place smells vaguely of joint compound.

"She's, ah, running a little late," an aide says with a rueful grimace and a deft, '90s-style shrug from the wrists.

Small wonder. This CBS magazine show, which debuted yesterday, was to be Chung's only job. Then, on May 17, she was made co-anchor of "CBS Evening News" with Dan Rather.

Constance Yu-Hwa Chung emerges from her office, apologetic, with a zillion-volt smile. At 46, she has a timeless beauty. Her laughter, which swoops low, is a fine thing.

"Right now, I really can't figure out what my routine should be, because I didn't really expect this. I didn't expect 'Evening News,'" she said. "I had my work life all planned. ... Now, I don't know when I'm going to travel for my stories."

Weren't you surprised at all the fuss the media made when you got the co-anchor's job?

"It's typical, I think, of the media today," she said. "It doesn't matter what type of story it is, or the true significance of the story. The media as a whole is overblowing everything."

Much, too, was made of Rather and Chung's hand-clasping debut. She said their friendship began in her early CBS years, 1971-76, when she was a general assignment reporter in Washington and Rather had the White House.

New CBS-TV co-anchor Connie Chung shares a kiss with her husband and interviewer Maury Povich on the set of the 'Maury Povich Show' in New York last month.

"I found myself going to him just to talk about careers," she said. "He was one of the veteran correspondents there. The 'new' reporters were me, Lesley Stahl, Bernard Shaw and Ed Bradley."

She and Rather kept in touch when she left the network, and they got together whenever their paths crossed on the road. "It is a real relationship, a genuine one," she said.

Her immediate concerns after the nightly newscast is for "Eye to Eye" to establish its own identity. She's very much aware that it will compete for attention with eight other primetime news magazines this fall.

"I won't pretend and tell you that we're going to be so extraordinarily different and so distinctive that we're going to reinvent the wheel," she said.

"Andrew Heyward (the show's executive producer) and I both know that a good magazine just consists of good stories well told," she said. "The burning question is how do we make it distinctive enough? ...

"We're going to be a little more topical than the programs that both Andrew and I have done before. We'll try to jump off the story of the week or the story of the day," she said. "We won't always be successful."

She's not worried that her newfound prominence at the anchor desk might interfere with her work.

"Notoriety," she says, "has become a part of our lives.

"We are on television on a small screen that is in everyone's home. We are in people's bedrooms," she said. "I always feel that because we are in this intimate relationship with the viewers, we are just ordinary people for them.

"When I meet people, that's exactly what I find. People don't say 'Hi, Ms. Chung.' They say, 'Hi, Connie.'"

"The other advantage would be the big interviews that I'm vying with Barbara Walters to get," she said.

Letterman's new show begins

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Late Night" host takes his first bows on CBS' "Late Show with David Letterman" on Aug. 30, CBS announced last Thursday.

"Although our show will have a new name and a new network, there's only one Dave, and his distinctive brand of comedy won't change," executive producers Peter Lassally and Robert Morton said in a news release.

Letterman announced plans to quit the NBC franchise and move to CBS on Jan. 14, ending speculation about his career plans that began in 1991. That's when NBC chose Jay Leno, instead of Letterman, to succeed Johnny Carson as host of NBC's "Tonight" show.

Moving to the 11:35 p.m. EDT time slot Monday through Friday, Letterman will compete head-to-head with Leno and "Tonight," as well as ABC's "Nightline" and, in many markets, the syndicated "Arsenio Hall Show."

Chevy Chase launches his own foray into the late night talk business a week later, Sept. 7, on Fox Broadcasting Co.

Letterman's new show will originate from CBS Studio 50, the renovated Ed Sullivan Theater on Broadway.

Letterman will be succeeded in NBC's late-night slot by Conan O'Brien, a relatively unknown, 30-year-old writer-comedian, in a show produced by "Saturday Night Live" chief Lorne Michaels.

During its 11-year run on NBC, "Late Night" won many honors, including five Emmy Awards for writing and directing.

NEW YORK (AP) — With summer approaching, hordes of TV viewers across the nation turned off their sets and went outside to play last week.

Or so it seemed, with total viewership of the Big Four networks down almost 20 percent from the season average, according to Nielsen Media Research figures released Tuesday.

Only NBC was exempt from the viewer defection. Getting a boost from three National Basketball Association championship games, the network not only held but slightly improved upon its season-to-date rating.

The audience for each of the other three networks, however, was down about 25 percent.

For the week, NBC won with an 11.5 rating and 22 share, while CBS had a 9.6 and 18 share, and ABC had an 8.7 and 16 share. Fox had a 5.4 and 10 share.

One rating point equals 931,000 television households. A share is the percentage of TV sets in use at any one time that are tuned to a particular broadcast.

For the week ending Sunday, NBC won five nights, with Tuesday and Saturday going to CBS.

NBC claimed eight of the Top 20 shows. These included three NBA championship games pitting the Phoenix Suns against the Chicago Bulls (which ranked first, second and fifth in the ratings), as well as the Monday movie (a rerun of the 1991 TV film "She Says She's Innocent"), and Katie Couric's one-hour interview with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, which ranked 14th.

In the evening news ratings, ABC held first place with a 9.4 rating and 21 share, while CBS was second with an 8 rating and 18 share. With only 94 percent coverage nationally because of pre-emptions for basketball coverage, NBC's newscast was third with a 7.1 and a 16 share.

Here are the top 10 shows, their networks and ratings: NBA championship (Game 3, Sunday), NBC, 17; NBA championship (Game 1, Wednesday), NBC, 16.8; "Roseanne," ABC, 15.8; "Home Improvement," ABC, 15.2; NBA championship (Game 2, Friday), NBC, 14.6; NBC Monday Night Movie, "She Says She's Innocent," NBC, 14; "60 Minutes," CBS, 13.5; "Coach," ABC, 13.1; CBS Tuesday Movie, "Deadbolt," CBS, 12.9; "Seinfeld," NBC, 12.2.

Another shot fired in war over TV violence, kids

By Lewis Beale
New York Daily News

By the time most American children reach the age of 18, they will have seen upward of 40,000 murders on TV.

Besides the real killings they'll see on news and reality-based shows, they'll have watched five acts of violence on the average hour-of prime-time TV programming, 20 for every hour of network (ABC, CBS, NBC) children's shows.

Sen. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., thinks it's time the television industry be held accountable for its excesses. Last month he introduced the Television Violence Report Card Act of 1993, which would require the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to produce a quarterly report listing acts of violence on TV programs, and the sponsors of those programs.

"The best way to respond to excess is to expose it," said Dorgan when the bill was introduced. "We are not proposing regulating or censoring television. Rather we are working to give parents information about where the violence is being shown and who is paying for it."

Dorgan's bill is the latest salvo in a long-running war of words over TV violence and its effects. Pitted against the TV industry are parents, academics and legislators, who not only decry video violence, but claim it contributes to anti-social behavior in children.

"Children imitate what they see on TV," says Dr. William Dietz of the American Academy of Pediatrics, who recently testified before Congress on the issue. "What interests the AAP are the messages given — that violence is frequent, inconsequential and practiced as often by the villain as the hero. That constitutes a passive endorsement of violence."

Says an NBC executive: "This pressure on television reflects a profound concern about the level of violence in our society. But the real question is whether it's an enormous leap to go from that concern to a belief that the problem is TV."

Nancy Signorielli, a University of Delaware professor who has measured TV violence for more than 20 years, says during the 1980s there was a significant increase in televised mayhem, particularly in network children's programming. Although the increase has leveled off, Signorielli claims "the amount of violence has remained stable" ever since. "I get more concerned about it in children's programming," she says, "because children are less able to pull it apart, to speak."

Such concerns led the Federal government to enter the controversy. In 1990, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., sponsored the TV Violence Act, which granted the networks an anti-trust exemption so they could collectively discuss ways to reduce violence. In response, NBC, CBS and ABC agreed upon common standards relating to the showing of violent acts. In addition, the cable industry conducted the first-ever study of violence on cable-originated programming. And later this summer, representatives of the entire TV industry — including over-the-air and cable networks, independent stations and producers — will meet in Los Angeles for a summit on the issue.

Despite this, there is still doubt in some quarters that the networks are serious about resolving the problem. "This issue is not a new one," says Dorgan, "but if you look at last month's (sweeps period), it was the most violent set of programs that was ever promoted on TV." Dorgan and others were particularly upset by the violence in the NBC movie "In the Line of Duty: Ambush at Waco" and in "Murder in the Heartland," an ABC fact-based miniseries about teen serial killers.

"There is little evidence," says the senator, "that the networks will do anything other than increase the sensation level and violence in their programs."

The industry has fought back against these accusations in several ways: By publicizing independent studies attacking the methodology of reports which found a direct link between televised and real-life violence; and, at the same time, pledging to reduce the amount of violence in their programming.

"I'm not sure we can ever prove there is a causal link between violent acts seen on TV and violent acts seen in the general public," says Chris Hikawa, head of broadcast standards at ABC. "But we know we influence attitudes, so we should do what we can to provide pro-social messages on this issue."

Hikawa says her network will be running more advisories at the beginning of programs, alerting viewers to their content. She also says ABC and other outlets are conferring more with programers and program suppliers about content. And she points to the August industry summit as a possible breakthrough.

"I don't expect any agreement to come out of that," she says, "but I hope that what it will lead to is that after hearing the speeches and seeing the statistics, when people go to write about a scene with conflict, they will think about how they will depict it, and what kind of consequences will come out of it."

It looks like there's serious political pressure being brought to bear on the TV industry. Is it listening?

"There's a great desire to be in synch with the standards the audience believes should be applied," says an NBC exec. "At the same time, there is a belief that in certain circumstances, like having a movie about what went on in Waco, if you simply said no violent acts whatsoever were appropriate, this would be going too far. The effort is to find a balance."

Signy Coleman: Back in the daily limelight

Signy Coleman is happy to be back in a soap opera and doubly pleased that she is playing such a challenging role as Hope, the blind woman who is involved with Victor in "The Young and the Restless." For three years, Signy played Celeste in "Santa Barbara" but it had been sometime since she left that show. Most of her career activity since then has been in prime-time series such as "Jake and the Fatman," "The Human Target" and "Fast Forward." Signy also worked in a few movies. (She has a small part in the current Robert Redford film, "Indecent Proposal.")

Signy Coleman enjoys finding character strengths, weaknesses

Signy also became a mother three years ago and her daughter Siena takes up all her free time these days. When Signy and Vincent Irizarry ("Guiding Light") were divorced, the tabloids jumped on their case. Signy thinks it's unfortunate that the tabloids can "dissect your personal life" that way but she said she weathered the storm and she and Vincent have remained friends. She also added that Vincent is a very good father.

Returning to soaps allows Signy a lifestyle that is compatible to being a single parent. The actress said the hours allow you to spend some quality time with your child. She can even take her child to work with her since Siena isn't going to school yet.

Acting is Signy's passion and she loves the process of finding the character's strengths and weaknesses. To prepare for the role of Hope, a blind woman, Signy went to the Braille Institute for instructions. She went through periods with a blindfold on and she said it gave her a whole new awareness. Also, Signy worked with a woman named Liz Canejo, who has been blind for 18 years and was able to delve into the background and learn what it is like to be blind. Signy says it's exciting to be playing a character from whom you can learn.

Now that she is back in the daily limelight of a soap, and the highest rated one at that, Signy was asked how she deals with fan attention. She replied that she has always been appreciative of fans and finds "most people who approach you are kind and courteous." The only drawback might be not being able to go to Disneyland with her daughter and expect to share a one-to-one experience without some fan of "The Young and the Restless" approaching them. However, as the actress admitted, it's a small price to pay for all the pluses that working in a highly visible soap brings.

'The Yound and the Restless' airs from 11 a.m. to noon MDT weekdays on CBS (KSL) and 2 to 3 p.m. MDT on CBS (KMVT.)

Hamilton maintains muscular, feminine figure

Q&A

Send your questions for Bettelou Peterson, Robin Adams Sloan or the TV Talkback column to The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, 83301.

Q: Hasn't Linda Hamilton, that muscle-toned beauty who starred opposite Arnold Schwarzenegger in "Terminator 2," built herself up to look like a muscle-bound freak? — M.R.

A: "Terminator 2" may be old news now, but Linda has worked hard to maintain the lean, sculpted looks she radiated in the movie. She's intent on proving that women can at the same time lift weights and look great in an evening dress. To look like Linda in "Terminator 2" you'd have to work out intensively for hours at a time six days a week. Even Hamilton couldn't maintain that grind, especially through her pregnancy (she had a baby girl in February). Her trim, muscular figure still looks great — and very feminine.

CHEAPSKATES: Seems no matter how much money some actors earn they can't bear to part with any of it, not even for charity. A number of the most prominent and highest paid stars — through their ever-present representatives, of course — were trying to get complimentary tickets to the AMFAR dinner held at the Cannes Film Festival to benefit AIDS research. These multi-millionaires might have managed to part with the $2500 per person to raise much-needed research money to fight the disease that has devastated the entertainment world.

Q: I read that Joan Crawford was one of those actresses who had many fans who were gay. Is this true? — T.E.

A: I don't have statistics, of course, but I do know that Noel Coward, for one, was a big fan. A note to Joan from Coward read, "Darling Joanie, It has suddenly occurred to me that I have loved you for 39 years." This note, among others, was in Crawford's estate and will be auctioned this month.

Q: Is it true that the premise of "Indecent Proposal" is based on a real event in the lives of Bruce Willis and his wife, Demi Moore? — H.J.

A: I would suggest not putting that question to Mr. and Mrs. Willis. Demi, who is planning a vacation from work for a while, says that she and Bruce have often been asked about what they would do if she were offered a million dollars to sleep with another man, much less Robert Redford, her "Indecent Proposal" costar. Both she and Bruce have developed a short and simple answer — never. For one thing, as big-time movie stars, they don't need the money. For another, despite rumors of an impending split, they remain fairly happy being married to, and sleeping with, each other.

RECESSION PRICE: For one performance in Los Angeles, tickets to Neil Simon's "Jake's Women," starring Alan Alda, will be made available on a "pay what you can" basis. If this policy is adopted by other producers, it would benefit the scores of theater lovers whose personal finances preclude their paying the high cost of today's theater tickets.

Q: What's this we hear about off-color comic Andrew Dice Clay cleaning up his act so that he can make a Hollywood comeback as a straight actor? — H.H.

A: It could be argued that Dice Clay can't make a comeback as a straight actor — simply because he never even came close to making it in that field to begin with. His movie "Ford Fairlane," a not-bad romp, was savagely attacked mostly because Andrew violates every politically correct taboo around. Other, lesser movie efforts and a try at a network TV show have gone nowhere. So, it's back to the drawing board. Dice Clay tells me his upcoming summer concert on July 10 — a pay-per-view event — will be foul and despicable, really nasty. Its title says it all — "No Apologies."

Q: With all the backstabbing you hear about in Hollywood, is there anyone out there who is known for allegiance to his associates over the years? — B.P.

A: The loyalty award could well go to Arsenio Hall, who has assembled a team that dates back to his days doing stand-up in small comedy clubs. His production team has evolved from his long association with his producer, director and even his musical director, Michael Wolff, leader of the "posse" band who befriended Hall when the then-unknown comic was the opening act for singer Nancy Wilson and Wolff was Wilson's bandleader. Hall vowed back then if he ever had a talk show he would involve Wolff and that's just what he did. Refreshing, isn't it?

Q: We are amazed by what a genuine sexpot Drew Barrymore has become. Did she do something special to transform herself from E.T.'s best pal to Amy Fisher on TV? — B.T.

A: I believe it's called growing up. Drew was a not especially happy child of 6 when she appeared in "E.T." School kids used to tease her about having a boy's name and her father was never around. Between the ages of 9 and 12, she was chubby. But then she grew up. At 18, Drew is indeed an attractive actress who has pulled her life together after much-publicized bouts of alcohol and substance abuse. Now, she eats what she wants, and maintains the voluptuous look that make her ideal in such flicks as "Poison Ivy" and as Amy Fisher on the tube. To spice things up, Drew even sports tattoos — a cross on her ankle and small cherubs on her back.

Q: Isn't Bob Hope's career, now that his 90th-birthday special is TV history, really over? — S.K.

A: Bob Hope, like a more mature George Burns, won't quit until forced to by a higher authority. Hope shows no signs of slowing down. He's currently hopscotching around the various charity and showbiz events, and says he's determined next year to star in the same number of TV specials as he did a year ago, four. At his age, Hope is being highly optimistic. Rumors that NBC, his longtime TV home, is putting Rapid Robert out to pasture are untrue, all parties say. Talks are continuing between Hope and the network brass, and no split from the tube peacock is envisioned.

At last, a hoops junkie in the White House

By Greg Dawson
Orlando Sentinel

Evidence continues to mount that TV sports junkies have a kindred spirit in the Oval Office.

Presidents have always thrown out first pitches and made phone calls to winning locker rooms, Bill Clinton's sportsmania seems to go beyond the macho P.R., judging by published reports that have him following ballgames on the tube while doing paperwork, and staying up past midnight to watch NBA playoff games from the West Coast on TNT.

At last, an unimpeachable role model for all us hoops fanatics. Just think, exactly the same conversation goes on in the White House that happens in common houses across America. Well, maybe not exactly the same.

She: Aren't you coming to bed?

He: Right after this game.

She: I thought basketball season was over.

He: That was college basketball. This is the NBA playoffs.

He: Huge. The winner goes to the next round, and then the winner of that series ...

She: Never mind. Listen, since you're going to be up would you mind going over this health care reform plan? Are you listening?

He: Just a second. Watch this replay. Jordan's just incredible. Were you saying something?

She: The health care reform bill?

He: Oh, yeah. Leave it there. I'll get to it at halftime.

NBC will air sports special

By John Carmody
The Washington Post

In what producer George Stevens Jr. hopes will be "a new tradition on the Washington scene," NBC will air a two-hour sports special on Tuesday to honor great figures in the world of sports.

"The Great Ones" will be taped at Constitution Hall on Sunday and President and Mrs. Clinton will attend, Stevens says. Proceeds from the fund-raiser will go to youth service programs, with the funds distributed by Youth Serv USA.

This year's "great ones" include boxing champ Muhammad Ali, golfer Arnold Palmer, three-time Olympic track gold medalist Wilma Rudolph, basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and baseball's Ted Williams.
